Dewey Backs Power To Act For Delegate In League

U. S. Agent Must Not Be Made to Consult Congress On Every Decision, He Says

Minneapolis, Oct. 24 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey declared tonight that American participation in a world peace organization "must not be subject to a reservation that would require our representative to return to Congress for authority every time he had to make a decision."

The New York Governor, matching in general the stand taken by President Roosevelt in a foreign policy speech in New York Saturday night, threw in the following reservation, with the added declaration that Mr. Roosevelt has demonstrated he "cannot work with a Congress of his own party."

"Obviously Congress, and only Congress, has the constitutional power to determine what quota of force it will make available and what discretion it will give our representative to use that force."

Congress Working as 'Partner'

"I have not the slightest doubt," Dewey said in a prepared broadcast manuscript, "that a Congress elected in working partnership with the President will achieve the results we all consider essential and grant adequate power for swift action to the American representative."

The Republican presidential candidate accused Mr. Roosevelt of having permitted the shipment to Japan of "as much as three million barrels a month of oil, the heart's blood of war, for use against China and for storage against America," up until four months before Pearl Harbor.

"Let those who claim to have exercised great foresight remember these lessons in history," he said. "And let us as a nation never forget them."

Moreover, he declared, the first two administrations of the New Deal sent 10 million tons of scrap iron and steel to Japan, "unchecked by my opponent until October 16, 1940."

"The weight of that scrap iron alone," he said, "was ten times the tonnage of the whole Japanese navy."

Governor Dewey's text follows:

It is mighty good to come back again to Minnesota, the State of that gallant leader, Commander Harold Stassen. As a great Governor and as a bold and courageous leader of opinion, he rendered services to his country equaled only by his present services in the Navy.

To the people of Minnesota he gave something else very precious and too long absent from our national life. He gave teamwork government, not one-man government.

As a result when he left for the Navy there was a first-class man ready and able to fill his shoes. That man has so ably and successfully conducted the affairs of the State that everyone agrees you will reelect, by an overwhelming majority, my good friend, Governor Edward J. Thye.

The experience of the people of Minnesota under these great Republican administrations points the way toward the progressive, forward-looking teamwork government the people will install in the Nation next January 20.

3 Great Objectives

On three great objectives, we, the American people, are wholly agreed. We are determined to carry through this war to swift and total victory. We are determined that the United States shall take the lead, even before victory in the war is won, in the establishment of a world organization to prevent

After 'Big 3' Meeting

U. S. Expects To Play Host To World Peace Conference

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Staff Writer

The United States hopes to play host in January to a full-dress United Nations conference aimed at creating a world security organization along the lines of the plan drafted at Dumbarton Oaks.

Earlier, possibly next month, Acting Secretary of State Stettinius disclosed yesterday, President Roosevelt may meet with Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin to complete the Dumbarton Oaks plan. Major unsettled question is voting procedure in event one of the great powers should be accused of aggression and threats to the peace.

Place and date for the January conference have not been decided, Stettinius said, but he made it plain this country would seek to play host. Other officials have indicated the meeting, comparable to the Versailles conference 25 years ago, will be held in the United States.

Stettinius said the presidential election is certainly a consideration in the planning but he did not say just how.

It is evident that whoever is elected President will take office before the United Nations conference and determine the role the U. S. would play.

Politics was referred to again when Stettinius, in estimating the time required to do the work ahead, noted that President Roosevelt has two busy weeks ahead (before election), after which he would be very tired.

Stettinius said he did not know whether the President would be able to arrange a meeting next month. Inquiry as to whether he was certain the Chief Executive would meet with Churchill and Stalin brought from Stettinius the explanation that there were several ways of perfecting the Dumbarton Oaks plan—diplomatic exchanges, a meeting of foreign min-

Mrs. Stassen Offers to Aid Dewey Drive

Former Governor's Wife Ready to Speak To Offset Ball Stand

By Edward T. Folliard

Minneapolis, Oct. 24.—A girl reporter from Latin America, Senorita Piedad Levi Castillo, observed the shelling on this lively political front as Governor Thomas E. Dewey arrived today, and shuddered at the thought of what would happen if the scene were south of the Rio Grande.

Senorita Castillo, one of 11 women journalists from South and Central America, arrived here on a tour shortly before the Dewey campaign train rolled into the Milwaukee and Rock Island depot.

"In South America," she said thoughtfully, "It is necessary to measure what you say."

Here in Minneapolis, and also in its twin city of St. Paul across the Mississippi, the air was filled with angry charges and epithets. These had been touched off by the action of Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.), in bolting the GOP to "vote for and support President Roosevelt."

Denounced for Double Cross

One Republican leader, as much concerned about the 1948 presidential prospects of former Gov. (now Lieut. Comdr.) Harold E. Stassen as the 1944 prospects of Thomas E. Dewey, accused Senator Ball of the "vilest double cross in the political history of Minnesota."

The Washington Post learned tonight that Mrs. Stassen called on Governor Dewey here and offered to issue a statement or make a speech that would offset Ball's action.

The consensus seemed to be that, whatever the effects of Senator Ball's "walk," Governor Dewey remained a favorite to capture Minnesota's 11 electoral votes two weeks from today. Both the Gallup poll and the Minnesota poll (conducted by the Cowles newspapers) show Governor Dewey leading President Roosevelt 52 to 48 among those who have made a decision.

Campaign Plan Misquoted, President Says

Cites Acceptance Speech Provision for 'Reports to People'

By Robert C. Albright

President Roosevelt yesterday answered inferences that he is now campaigning "in the usual sense" by accusing newspapers of quoting the phrase out of context.

He said he was amazed at the number of reputable newspapers which quoted his acceptance speech pledge without ever a reference to the exception he had made.

The President's "out" was this sentence in the same passage of his July 20 speech:

"I shall, however, feel free to report to the people the facts about matters of concern to them and especially to correct any misrepresentations."

More Appearances Slated

Mr. Roosevelt was questioned about campaigning "in the usual sense" after Democratic National Chairman Robert E. Hannegan in New York added several new personal appearances to his campaign itinerary, and definitely scheduled a Soldier Field, Chicago speech, for this Saturday night.

Hannegan announced a Wilmington, Del., rear platform appearance Friday morning, and a trip to Camden, N. J., before his speech at Shibe Park, Philadelphia, Friday night.

(It was learned that he probably will visit the big New York Shipbuilding Co. plant at Camden and the Cramp shipyards at Philadelphia. Both were stops in his 1940 "inspection" tours.)

Hannegan said the President also will make a rear-platform appearance at Fort Wayne, Ind., en route to Chicago.

Put on "D. V." Basis

The President announced no plans beyond Chicago at yesterday's press conference, though Cleveland and Detroit stops have figured in advance speculation. He confirmed the Chicago speech on a D. V. basis. He said that meant Deo Volente (God willing).

Ball Action Called 'Doublecross Of the Man Who Made Him'

St. Paul, Oct. 24 (AP).—The Republican Party in Minnesota is "looking forward to mobilizing every bit of its energy to win in November" and not "backward to Senator Joseph H. Ball who at no time had any intention of supporting the GOP presidential candidate," Mrs. Chris Carlson of Blue Earth, Minn., Republican national committeewoman, said today.

Mrs. Carlson said Ball, Minnesota Republican who announced yesterday he would support President Roosevelt, "timed his statement so that it would do the most damage to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and the most good for President Roosevelt."

State Senator J. V. Weber, secretary of the Stassen-for-President preconvention campaign, termed Ball's action "the vilest double-cross in the history of Minnesota politics" in a statement which continued:

"He has double-crossed not only himself, but the one man who made him—Commander Stassen, former Minnesota Governor. He has double-crossed a multitude of men and women who accepted him upon his appointment."

British Enter Key To Nazis' Holland Line

Capture Could Peril 60,000 to 70,000 Germans and Break Antwerp Blockade

London, Oct. 24 (AP).—Striking the Germans with ever greater fury, Lieut. Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey's British Second Army fought tonight into the streets of 'S Hertogenbosch, keystone of the enemy's defense system in western Holland, and capturd the northeast factory district of that ancient city.

A field dispatch declared the capture of 'S Hertogenbosch would imperil the entire German force, estimated at between 60,000 and 70,000 men in western Holland, and go far toward breaking the enemy's blockade of the great port of Antwerp. The Germans were reported rushing reserves into the area.

The three-day British offensive northward from Eindhoven had captured nearly 1500 prisoners and it appeared Nazi defenses were crumbling all along a 12-mile front. A captured German colonel admitted the sudden British offensive had taken the enemy by surprise.

"Boche Taken Hard Knock"

"The Boche has taken a hard knock," a British staff officer said.

The Germans still held the business section of 'S Hertogenbosch, with the South Willems Canal between them and the British. Two other armored British columns, from the east and the south, were little more than 2 miles from the communications hub. There was conjecture whether the Nazis would fight for the city until it was destroyed as they did for Aachen.

The left wing of the British advance captured Best, 6 miles northwest of Eindhoven, after an advance of 5 miles.

Canadian forces, battling to clear the Schelde Estuary approaches to Antwerp, drove Beveland Island, which sprawls along the northern side of the estuary, and pushed nearly a mile and a half inside the island to within a few hundred yards of the town of Mairie.

Bold Punch in Dark

The bold punch onto the island was made in darkness with infantry, tanks and armored cars leading the way. With daylight, the attackers were given air support and advanced steadily in severe fighting.

Two other Nazi strongholds north of Antwerp and east and north of the causeway — Bergen op Zoom and Rosendaal — were threatened by the Canadian push beyond the island.

Underground In Spain Calls For Civil War

Madrid Admits Partisans Have Taken 22 Frontier Towns

London, Oct. 24 (AP).—The first open call for a new civil war in Spain has been issued by the underground newspaper, Conquest of Spain, which urged that officers of the Spanish army take up arms against Generalissimo Franco and the Falange, Spanish Republican headquarters here announced today.

[Official Madrid radio was quoted by the Exchange Telegraph News Agency tonight, according to the International News Service, as admitting that Republican Partisan forces have occupied 22 Spanish villages near the French frontier, including Alos, in Lerida Province. The broadcast reported that 3000 Republicans were either killed or wounded in an operation that encircled the Partisan forces.—Editor's note.]

Conquest of Spain is the official newspaper of the Republican junta which operates from secret headquarters in Madrid and presumably is published in the Spanish capital.

Its call for revolution, the first so bold, appeared in its thirty-sixth issue, published within the past three days, Republicans here said.

Official German news agencies, meanwhile, were terming the in-

Jap Victim Left Estate By Oral Will

Los Angeles, Oct. 24. (AP).—Just before a Japanese submarine submerged with 100 captured American seamen on its deck, most of them with their hands bound, one of them made an oral will.

The story was told today by one of 23 survivors from a merchant ship sunk by the sub in a petition for probate of the will of First Mate Clement Carlin, of the torpedoed ship.

The officer left for his entire estate, estimated at $10,000, to one of four brothers, John, Glendale, Calif., defense worker.

As proof there was offered the affidavit of Charles E. Pyle, crew member of the sunken ship, rescued by an Allied seaplane He said:

"On July 2, 1944, I was a member of the . . ., a merchant ship of the U. S. Maritime Commission, which was at that time operating in the . . . On that day, the . . . was torpedoed and sunk. Russian Gains Widen Front In East Prussia

Augustow Captured; 14 Strong German Points Overrun

London, Oct. 24 (AP).—The Red Army battled deeper through the forest of East Prussia today on an expanding front more than 35 miles wide, overcoming a string of at least 14 desperately-defended strong points and pressing within 6 miles of the big rail and road hub of Gumbinnen.

The Moscow broadcast communique, announcing these gains by young Gen. Ivan D. Chernyakhovsky's Third White Russian army, disclosed a new thrust threatening East Prussia farther southeast had captured the Polish border bastion of Augustow and 50 other population centers on a 20-mile front from Augustow to Suwalki.

The Soviet announcement indicated the first great rush of Chernyakovsky's men, which carried them more than 20 miles into the homeland of the German Junkers, had slowed down.

Nazis Counterattacking

Now a powerful Soviet army group was moving into position for a new series of thrusts against German forces. These included the newly organized Nazi Home Guard, but Moscow dispatches said these poorly armed makeshift forces failed to meet the initial test, many being readily killed or captured. One report said many hid in the woods until the Russians passed, then returned home.

Regular German armor, recovering from the initial shock, was counterattacking west of the East Prussian town of Goldap, held by the Russians, and was massed on the eastern and southeastern approaches to Gumbinnen, which

Battleships And Cruisers Hit In Sulu, Sibuyan Seas

MacArthur's Forces Kill 3000 of Enemy, Take Dozen Towns And Land on Samar

Pearl Harbor, Oct. 24 (INS).—Japanese imperial fleet units, including battleships and cruisers, have been sighted and attacked by our carrier planes of the Third Fleet in Philippine waters, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

The communique said the enemy forces were sighted yesterday and were immediately subjected to attack, apparently by Admiral William F. Halsey's carriers which are under the command of Vice Admiral Marc A. Mitscher.

The Japanese naval forces were sighted moving eastward through the Sibuyan and the Sulu Seas, apparently attempting to inclose the island of Leyte in a naval pincers.

West of Mindanao

The Sulu Sea, one of the biggest expanses of inclosed waters in the Philippines, is northeast of Borneo and directly west of Mindanao. The Sibuyan Sea washes against Panay Island to the south, Mindoro to the west and Luzon and Leyte to the north and east, respectively.

Admiral Nimitz's communique said merely:

"On 23 October (west longitude date) enemy forces, including battleships and cruisers, were sighted moving eastward through the Sibuyan Sea and Sulu Sea in the Philippines and were attacked by carrier aircraft of the Third Fleet. Further details are not yet available."

"Digging-In" Strategy Seen

Observers interpreted the admiral's terse communique as indicating an effort upon the part of the Japanese to place themselves on the inside of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces on the island of Leyte and any of our naval forces which might be outside the island chain to the far eastward.

However, there was the possibility that since the communique said our carrier forces have attacked the enemy naval forces in waters inside the flank of the Philippines, our carriers also might be inside this land shield.

Philippine waters are such that the enemy forces could make efforts to break away from their main units and attempt to slip into many straits into the waters neighboring Leyte.

Would Face Destruction

However, they would thus face damage or destruction by the massed strength of our forces in both the Third Fleet and the Seventh Fleet, operating with MacArthur in support of his landing.

It was recalled that both Nimitz and Halsey have repeatedly expressed the "desire" to engage the imperial Japanese navy, intimating the outcome would never be in doubt and that the war in the Pacific would be materially shortened

Way Out of War Marriages

British Bill Would Help Girls Divorce Foreign 'Black Sheep'

London, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—Legislation which would enable British girls to free themselves of unfortunate wartime marriages with the "black sheep" of the various Allied armed forces was offered in Commons today and met with rough sledding.

Members spent most of the afternoon debating the English divorce laws, which require a wife to seek a divorce in the land of her husband's legal residence. The bill would affect only persons married after September 3, 1939.

Lieut. Col. Anthony A. Harmsworth warned his colleagues that "obviously every step for easier divorce makes for more irresponsible marriages," and that it was a mattter for considerable thought "before we . . . make the divorce laws of this country approximate those of Reno."

The proposed law would enable an English woman to apply for divorce in England, even though her husband might be a legal resident of any other country.

Laborite John Parker told of an Australian ship which came to England with only 10 per cent of its crew married. After six months, he said, 60 per cent had married British women.

Parker explained that the bill was not intended as a reflection against the soldiers of the Allied nations. "But among large bodies of men there are bound to be black sheep."

Street Lights In Nazi Cities Hint Sabotage

With the U. S. First Army in Germany, Oct. 24 (AP).—American pilots have observed street light fully turned on several nights recently in the Rhineland cities of Cologne, Duisburg, and Dusseldorg.

There are a number of possible explanations: That the Germans were forced to put on light to move heavy and urgent military traffic: that rioting or other trouble had broken out; that the lights were turned on by foreign "slave" workers acting as saboteurs.

Castel San Pietro Now Looms Ahead On Bologna Road

Rome, Oct. 24 (AP).—A flanking threat to Bologna, key German center in northern Italy, has been developed by American capture of Frassineto and further gains to the east. Frassineto lies five miles southwest of Castel San Pietro, Po Valley town 13 miles southeast of Bologna on the lateral Rimini highway.

Capture of Castel San Pietro would put the Americans in open country and in a position to use the all-weather highway for a smash on Bologna from the east, cutting behind strong German forces opposing the American frontal offensive against Bologna from the south.

Move Forward Imola

Other Yanks to the east advanced two and a half miles along a highway toward Imola, another junction point on the Bologna-Rimini Highway and seven miles southeast of Castel San Pietro. They swept up Fontanelice, seven miles southwest of Imola.

Farther east along Highway 67 British troops pushed north from Portico toward Forli, also a junction point on the Bologna-Rimini highway, 20 miles southeast of Imola.

In the Adriatic sector, Monte Cavallo, west of the Savio River and south of Cesena, was captured by Indian troops. Along the Adriatic coast other Eighth Army forces advanced a half-mile beyond Cerva and Canadian forces enlarged their bridgehead across the Savio, north of Cesena.

Enemy Attacks Repulsed

Strong German tank attacks hurled at the Canadians were beaten off, with the Nazis suffering heavy casualties.

A British bridgehead across the Savio west of Cesena was battered by a heavy German artillery barrage. Supplies were being moved to the defenders.

The British north of Cervia reported encountering only rearguard action from the Germans and apparently Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring is withdrawing his troops from the Adriatic sector.

British forces are now within 12 miles of Ravenna on the coast.

ternecine clashes along the Pyrenees border a Franco defense against "a Red invasion" from France and reporting that Republican thrusts into Spani had been routed.

Reports from Paris said Republican guerillas, fighting the Franco forces along the border, were recruting officers of the regular army into their ranks—possibly as a result of the newspaper's call—and that a definite struggle to seize control from Franco was under way.

Strife Rife Throughout Peninsula

A correspondent of the newspaper, Liberation Soir of Paris, said strife was raging throughout the Spanish Peninsula, with the guerillas under the direction of the Republican junta. He said several factories were seized by the Republicans and that they had made several effective raids on communications, destroying many trains.

Official Spanish reports insisted the border raids of the past three weeks, staged by Spanish Maquisards who previously had operated with the French Maquis against the Germans, had failed and the raiders were cut off and facing annihilation. The Republicans said the fighting was mounting in scope and intensity.

A dispatch from Lerida, Spain, said that Spanish Army troops had recaptured Canejad and cleared the Maquisards from the Aran Valley in the Catalonian Pyrenees, the main escape route for the Republicans to southern France.

Captives Face Execution

Army officers were quoted as saying the Maquisards were operating in groups of little more than 100 and that they now faced capture, surrender or annihilation. Those captured with arms face summary execution.

In Paris, Spanish republicans said clashes had extended deep into Catalonia and were rising in intensity. The republicans were said to be operating from bases in the Toulouse area, reportedly given them by the French in return for their help in fighting the Germans during the occupation of France.

The Berlin radio said 4000 Maquisards—described as "Reds"—already had been killed in the Spanish frontier fighting, a rather high figure for casualties in view of a subsequent German broadcast that only small groups were operating against Franco's forces.

Paris newspapers complained that French censorship was preventing full details of the situation in Spain being made public. The newspaper "Combat" reported about 40,000 Germans who fled from France into Spain had been regrouped and formed into a "regular army, fully equipped."

1200 Reported Interned

In apparent reaction to this and other reports of German activity in Spain, the Spanish embassy in London denied that large numbers of Germans had crossed from France into Spain. The Embassy said only 1200 had crossed and that they had been interned.

Meanwhile, official quarters in London said they had no confirmation of rumor of a general uprising.

Spanish Republican headquarters here said guerillas were active in three major Spanish provinces—Galicia, in the northwest; Estremadura, in the southwest; and Andalusia, in the south.

the Minneapolis Auditorium tonight, she saw Governor Dewey lay aside his needle and use a bludgeon on President Roosevelt.

The GOP nominee for President had been welcomed by a lunch-hour crowd of 25,000 when he arrived shortly after noon. The Bearcat band, an American Legion outfit that came on from Milwaukee, played the Washington Post March as the Governor and Mrs. Dewey, the latter holding a great bouquet of chrysanthemums, stepped down from the train. In some places along the route to the Nicollet Hotel, the crowds on the sidewalks were three and four deep. It was the largest throng Dewey had encountered since he was in St. Louis a week ago.

Dewey Never Met Ball

At a press conference, Governor Dewey was asked for comment on Senator Ball's bolt to President Roosevelt.

"I enjoy the acquaintance and friendship of most of the members of the United States Senate," Dewey said, "but unfortunately I have never had the pleasure of meeting Senator Ball."

"He says you have not invited him to discuss foreign policies, and he seems to take exception to that," a rteporter said.

"I invited all the Republican Senators and Representatives within 200 or 300 miles of Albany," Dewey said, "but I did not impose that burden on those who live farther away, unless they came voluntarily. Then I was happy to see them. I have met practically all of the Senators and Congressmen in their own States as I visited those States. Unfortunately, Senator Ball is not here today."

A Minnesota newspaperman asked Governor Dewey if he didn't remember meeting Senator Ball four years ago, and the nominee replied he couldn't recall it.

Governor Dewey was reminded that President Roosevelt had repudiated his communistic supporters, and he was asked if he was ready to repudiate "your own ultra-conservative support including McCormick, Gannett, et al."

"I have stated many times," Dewey replied, "that I accept the support of all who agree with the principles I have espoused."

"Governor, Senator Truman here in Minneapolis charged that eight Republican isolationist Senators could prevent any strong foreign policy you wished to adopt."

"My comment is, nonsense."

Getting back to the desertion of Senator Ball, most political writers here felt that it would have more effect in the east than it would have here. The big question concerned what effect Ball's action would have on the political fortunes of former Governor Stassen, now a lieutenant commander on the staff of Admiral Halsey in the Pacific.

The Stassen people look upon their hero as a strong contender for the Republican presidential nomination in 1948 if Governor Dewey fails to make the grade on November 7. They are afraid now that Ball's behavior will cause the Republican organization nationally to turn thumbs down on Stassen.

If Dewey wins Minnesota it will be because he was expected to win it. But if he loses, the blame will fall on the Stassenites, whose most conspicious member has been Senator Ball.

In the face of this prospect, the Stassen people were doing everything possible to assure Gov. Dewey that Ball was a recalcitrant minority of one.

2 Views of Ball's Action

There were two general viewpoints in Minneapolis about effect of Ball's conduct. One was that it might hurt Gov. Dewey but not fatally. The other was that it would help him, since he friends of Stassen will now work all the harder.

In support of the argument that Ball's announcement won't have much effect on Dewey's chances in Minnesota, the political writers called attention to a poll conducted by the Cowles newspapers. Before Ball made his original announcement that he was withholding his support from Dewey, the poll showed 52 for Dewey, 48 for Roosevelt. After Ball's announcement that he was on the fence, another poll was taken and the figures remained exactly the same.

Incidentally, the Minnesota poll has shown that more people in this state listen o Gov. Dewey's speeches over the radio than to President Roosevelt's.

Jewish Council Plans Program To Aid Bond Sales

Objectives of the drive are to sell enough bonds to buy an "alligator" for the Navy, and to help obtain a fleet of L-4 liaison planes and a "weasel" for the Army.

On this morning's radio program, Lieutenant-Colonel Hoppock will explain how the "weasel" has been invaluable in recent Army amphibious operations.

Struck by Truck, Wave Dies Here

Wave Margaret Nancy Neubauer, of Mount Harrilton, Calif., died at Bethesda Naval Hospital yesterday of injuries received Sunday night when she was struck by a Navy truck at Dahlgren, Va.,

Miss Neubauer, who enlisted February 5, was a daughter of Dr. F. J. Neubauer, astronomer at the Lick Observatory, Mount Hamilton.

Dutch Explain Name 'S Hertogenbosch

New York, Oct. 24 (INS).—The Netherlands Information Bureau today clarified the unfamiliar appearance of the name of the Dutch own—'S Hertogenbosch—which the British Second Army is about to capture.

The S preceded by an apostrophe is the same possessive form we use in English, but the Dutch place it before the noun instead of after. Also "bosch" in Dutch means "woods" or "forest" and "hertogen" means "duke." The town also has a French name, "Boise le Duc," which means the same thing—"The Duke's Woods."

Shortwave Hypnotism Suggested for Tiredness

London, Oct. 21 (U.P.).—War-tired workers and others "just plain tired" can be refreshed, restored and revitalized by shortwave hypnotism, in the opinion of Dr. Alexander Cannon, of the Isle of Man, writing today in the publication Medical Press and Circular.

Cannon said tha hypnotism, based on wave-lengths "in some way common to so-called shortwaves in the electronic spectrum," enables a person to awaken with a new feeling of energy and power which "may last from one to four weeks."

DEWEY

future wars. We are determined that our fighting men shall find when they return victorious a vigorous and productive America, the kind of America in which there will be jobs and opportunity for all.

It was for the purpose of keeping our unity for peace that, last August, I lifted our peace plans wholly out of partisan conflicts—by joining hands with Secretary Hull in work on the proposed organization to prevent future wars.

In m yaddress on that subject, I have tried to keep it out of partisan debate.

Unhappily, however, last Saturday night, my opponent once again sowed among us the seeds of disunity. He made a long speech on foreign affairs. We had hoped he would speak to the American people as grown-ups and tell us what our foreign policy is and where it is going.

Future of Small Nations

"We had also hoped to hear some word of cheer about the smaller nations, so important to the conscinece of the American people—some word about the fate o fPoland, somehope for the people of Italy, some assurance that the Scandinavian countries which have suffered so much, and the other small countries, might soon be admitted to their full partnership in the work for organized peace.

But Mr. Roosevelt gave us none of that. Instead, he sat by the fireside and dreamed of yesterday. He paraded before the American people the ghosts of the dead past. He told us a few bits of history, carefully selected, and then said, in effect, "Ask me no questions. You are not entitled to know where we are going. Just leave everything to me."

Now Mr. Roosevelt said in that speech, "I am giving you the whole story," but the isolated bits of history he gave were only a very small part of the story. I had intended to talk tonight about some of the problems of the American farmer. I have deferred that talk so I could without delay look with you tonight at the vital events my opponents left out of what he called "the whole story."

Cites 1933 Speech

My opponent says the heavy hand of isolationism goverened our country in the 1920s. Does he mean to apply that term to the three great Republican Secretaries of State, Charles Evans Hughes, Frank B. Kellogg and Henry L. Stimson, his own present Secretary of War? If so, I am afraid he has a convenient memory. It was my opponent himself who said of the day he took office, March 4, 1933, "the world picture was an image of substantial peace. International consultation and widespread hope for the bettering of relations between the nations gave to all of us a reasonable expectation that the barriers to mutual confidence, to increased trade and to the peaceful settlement of disputes could be progressively removed."

And that was the truth. My opponent did inherit a progressive improvement structure of internationl cooperation—from the disarmament Conference of 1921 led by Charles Evans Hughes, through the great Kallogg-Brind Pact of 1928, in which most of the nations of the world renounced was as an instrument of national policy.

But it was on Marcr 5, 1933, that Aolph Hitler made himself dictator of Germany. That was a fateful year. Germany walked out of the disarmament conference. Germany and Japan quit the League of Nations. And tragically, under the leadership of Mr. Roosevelt, America did her own bit toward the breakdown of international cooperation for peace.

Rejected League in 1935

Mr. Roosevelt now speaks very fondly of the League of Nations. But it was he who in 1933 said this of the league: "We are not memmers and we do not contemplate membership."

He rejected the collaboration withthe League which had previously established, and in 1935, the American representative at Geneva was instructed "that we desire to follow our course independently."

Here are two parts of the story my opponent conveniently forgot. Now let's look at some more.

It was also in 1935 that instead of the policy of consultation with other nations, a noverwhelmingly Democratic Congress adopted the fruitless Neutrality Act and the President signed it.

But it was in 1933 that we really had our last chance to bring order out of the chaos of international money exchange and trade. The London economic conference had been labored over for months by Republican Secretary of State Stimson. Yet, as one of his early acts as President, Mr. Roosevelt deliberately scuttled that conference. That was the most completely isolationist action ever taken by an American President in our 150 years of history. It was that event that led at least one European statesman to say there was then nothing ahead in Europe but war.

Year after year, from 1933 to 1939, our representatives in Berlin and Tokyo in their confidential reports which are now partly made public, warned of the growing danger.

Appropriations Cut

Year after year, our chiefs of staff reported on the uttterly impoverished and pitifully small manpower of our Army. Year after year, the Budget Bureau, which is under the personal direction of the President, cut down the amount requested. It was right in the fall of 1939, after the second World War had actually begun, that Mr. Roosevelt's Budget Bureau cut out 552 million dollars of amounts certified by the Army for critical and essential items.

It was in January, 1940, that Mr. Roosevelt told the Congress that one billion eight hundred million dollars for national defense was, in his judgment, "a sufficient amount for the coming year," although he admitted that it was "far less than many experts on national defense think should be spent."

It was in that month that I called publicly for a two-ocean Navy, a concept which Mr. Roosevelt still later called "just plani dumb."

It was in thost terrifying days of the Nazi blitz, in May of 1940, that he told us we should not become "discombolated." Then, with France about to fall, he publicly announced on June 4 that he saw no reason for Congress to stay in session. It was an election year—so in that hour of national peril he said that a continued session of Congress would serve no useful end except, sarcastically, the laudable purpose of making speeches.

Refused to Go Home

It was that American Congress which refused at that historic time to go home. It stayed in Washington and worked.

It was that Congress which then passed the National Selective Service Act, sponsored by a Republican Congressman and an anti-New Deal Democrat. It was that Congress that stayed after it had been told to go home, which ran the appropriations and authorizations for national defense up to 12 billion dollars.

Here, then are some more chapters of the story—all of which my opponent conveniently forgets. But the American people will not forget them when they go to the polls in November.

In his speech of last Saturday night, my opponent did remember the Washington Arms Conference by which, for the first time, we succeeded in restricting Japan to an inferior naval relationship of 5-5-3. But he forgot that he was supposed to be telling "the whole story." He complained that we "scuttled" part of the strength of our Navy. But that is not what he said at the time. Then, in a magazine article, Mr. Roosevelt asked America to trust Japan and complained of "the delay in the scrapping of United States ships as provided for and pledged in accordance with the treaty." What he also forgot last Saturday night was that as late as 1934, he called the Washington Arms Conference, a "milestone in civilization."

How election times change men's memories; If we are going to learn the lessons for future use, we have to keep the record straight.

Scrap Kept Flowing

It was in that year, 1934, that Japan served notice of termination of the limitation treaty which kept her navy inferior to ours. Yet, it was in the first two administrations of the New Deal that this country sent 10 million tons of scrap iron and steel to Japan, unchecked by my opponent until October 16, 1940. The wegiht of that scrap iron alone was ten times the tonnage of the whole Japanese navy.

Mr. Roosevelt said last Saturday that we could have "compromised" with Japan, "by selling out the heart's blood of the Chinese people." Well, let's see what he did.

In addition to scrap iron, he permitted the shipment of as much as three million barrels a month of oil, the heart's blood of war, for use against China [illegible] against America. It continued to flow until July of 1941, four months before Pearl Harbor.

Let those who claim to have exercised great foresight remember these lessons in history. And let us as a nation never forget them.

Now, my opponent in his speech actually blamed a handful of Republicans for our failure to go into the World Court in 1935.

That was when Mr. Roosevelt was still on the crest of his leadership, with three-fourths of the United States Senate Democratic. Even with the help of nine Republicans he still could not muster a two-thirds vote. Since then he has warred with Congress at every major turn. He has insulted its integrity and its members have learned the bitter lesson that legislation asked for one purpose, is twisted to another. This is a sad foundation on which to build the teamwork necessary for the future. That's why it's time for a change.

Aired Views on Peace

Three times in recent months I have discussed at length what I consider the sound and successful program for lasting peace. I have emphasized that this work must be pressed forward without waiting for the end of the war. I have emphasized, as my opponent has not, that "we must make certain that our participation in this world organization is not subjected to reservations that would nullify the power of that organization to maintain peace and to halt future aggression." That means, of course, that it must not be subject to a reservation that would require our representative to return to Congress for authority every time he had to make a decision. Obviously Congress, and only Congress, has the constitutional power to determine what quota of force it will make available, and what discretion it will give our representative to use that force.

I have not the slightest doubt that a Congress which is working in partnership with the President will achieve the result we all consider essential and grant adequate power for swift action to the American representative. But those who would attempt to ride rough-shod over Congress and to dictate the course it should follow before it has even been acquainted with the facts are trifling with the hope of the world. They are deliberately, in my judgment, seeking to participate a hardening of minds. If this stubborn course is pursued, it can only result once again, as in 1919, in a disastrous conflict between the President and the Congress. To that I will never be a party.

All Have Erred

I deeply believe that we cannot build an understanding and a purpose for our future if we are to continue to have abuse from the President or the members of Congress.

None of us has been all-wise in these matters. Individual Congressmen and Senators of both parties have made mistakes. Individual citizens have made mistakes. Every one of us—both in and out of office—has made mistakes.

I am not interested in the mistakes of any individual—in either party. I am interested—the people of this country are interested—in what the next Congress will do. We must not find ourselves after next January 20, stalled on dead center as a result of this series of recrimination between my opponent and the Congress. He has already demonstrated that he cannot work with a Congress of his own party. It is unmistakably clear that our future demands that we have a new chief executive who can and will work with the new Republican Congress beginning next January 20. We must be able to go forward harmoniously and effectively if we are to meet the mighty problems of peace.

Today's Leaders

Who will lead the next Senate and the next House? Well, here are the acknowledged leaders today:

Senator Wallace H. White, jr., of Maine, acting minority leader of the United States Senate.

Senator Arthur Vandenburg of Michigan, chairman of the Senate Republican Conference Committee.

Senator Warren R. Austin of Vermont, chairman of the Republican national convention foreign relations subcommittee.

Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, chairman of the Republican steering committee.

Senator Kenneth Wherry of Nebraska, Republican Senate whip.

Joseph W. Martin, jr., Massachusetts, the minority Republican leader of the House of Representatives.

I hold in my hand a telegram from each of these gentlemen. Let me read you the wire from Senator Wallace H. White, the acting minority leader of the United States Senate. It reads:

"Your statements in support of a postwar organization and your vigorous leadership in developing and clarifying our country's foreign policy have my respect and approval. Your views will be accorded enthusiastic and loyal support by Republicans of the Senate and by the American people."

Now let me read a wire from Joseph W. Martin, whom my opponent last Saturday night conceded is likely to be the next speaker of the House of Representatives. It reads:

"When elected President, you can count on enthusiastic support of the Republican House of Representatives to carry into effect your plan for United States leadership in organization to cooperate with other nations for world peace. I shall personally be very pleased to follow your splendid leadership in bringing this plan into reality."

Must Work Together

I have made public the rest of these messages tonight. Here is the kind of unity we need in this country—the kind we will need so desperately in these important years ahead.

From the beginning of this campaign I have insisted that organization for world peace can and must be a bipartisan effort. I shall continue to insist on that approach.

The avoidance of future wars is too important to be in the sole custody of any one man—of any one group—or or any one party. It is too important to hang by the slender thread of one man's continuity in office.

Only with the unity now demonstrated by the telegrams I have read to you from the next leaders of the Congress and the Senate can we achieve the kind of action necessary to preserve peace. Only with a Chief Executive who will work with Congress in harmony can our future be assured.

Our work for future peace must and will become on January 20 next year a bipartisan effort, bringing to it the ablest men in our country from both political parties.

That sense of unity can also be brought to our domestic affairs. With a President who will cooperate with the Congress, we need not fear the peace. For agriculture, for labor and for business, we have an unlimited future before us, if we will seize it and unite to bring it about.

Certainly, this is the least we can do in the name of those who are fighting today to make that future possible. With God's help we shall unite America and go forward once again.

Homesick Soldier To Get Clarinet To Chase 'Blues'

Following a letter printed in Sunday's ost, an Air Forces corjoral stationed in Mississippi will soon have the clarinet he wants.

Haskell B. Davis of 1425 Van Buren st. nw., a commercial artist, yesterday took to Kit's the silver clarinet hepurchased there several years ago, asking that it be sent to the corporal.

"I know it will mean more to him than it could to me," Davis said.

The letter, addressed to Mrs. Carl Spaatz of "Music For the Services," told of the loss of the corporal's clarinet and explained he was more homesick since being deprived of his music.

To help "Music for the Services" in responding to requests and in maintaining the USO Music Canteen at 1330 G st. nw., here's what you can do:

Turn in any instrument or phonograph you can spare to Kitt's, 1330 G st. nw. Or phone Miss Jones, Republic 6212, for pickup.

Take sheet music and records to the Southwest Branch Library, 7th and H sts. sw., or to the Music Canteen, 1330 G st., Saturdays, Sundays or Mondays.

Send money to Mrs. Stuart Godfrey, chairman of "Music for the Sedvices" at 3619 O st. nw.

ary, was held firmly by the Canadians, though hard fighting was in progress for Fort Frederik-Hendrik, just west of the town. A field dispatch said Allied bombing had knocked all but one of the Germans' long-range guns at Vlissingen, which have effectively blocked the sea entrance to the Schelde.

A previous mistaken report that the Canadians had withdrawn from Breskens was believed to have been caused by confusion over the withdraway of a small Canadian patrol from Fort Frederik-Hendrik. Neither side held the fort at latest report.

Possibly a fourth German stronghold in Holland was threatened by the British offensive which began over the week end. It was reported one column of Tommies, after reaching Boxtel, six miles south of 'S Hertogenbosch, had sung west in a thrust on Tilburg, a city of 81,000 only eight miles away.

The British offensive was ravaging the neat Dutch countryside, yet the Dutch people stood before their smoldering homes and cheered the liberating Tommies.

For another day there was no Allied report of action on the First Army front inside Germany, but a German military commentator reported that an American attack southeast of Geilenkirchen, 12 miles north of Aachen, had been repulsed. He said the Americans were trying to gain "good attacking poistions" for a general offensive.

The first snows of winter added weather difficulties to American and French troops in northern France. The German radio reported American artillery was lying a heavy barrage on the fortress city of Metz. Street fighting continued in Maizieeres les Metz, a short distance north of Metz, with doughboys holding about three-fourths of the town. An Allied communique said gains were made in the Vosges Mountains against "stiff resistance."

The Nazis are using at least one "Cossack" cavalry regiment in the Vosges, headquarters reported. The mounted troops are supplied with the finest available equipment, including fur-trimmed uniforms. They dismount to do their fighting, but can carry much heavier equipment for mountain fighting than can an infantry regiment.

WMC to Crack Down To Meet War Needs

In Pre-War Era

Roosevelt Curbed Army, Engel Says

Representative Albert Engel (R., Mich.) charged yesterday that President Roosevelt deprived the armed forces of equipment in the prewar years by cutting War Department requests for funds and by withholding from Congress report son the growth of German air power.

He denied in a statement that the war effort was hampered by congressional reluctance to provide adequate funds for the Army and cited a 1937 report by the American military attache in Berlin "which gave detailed information in grave warnings to this country—but not one word of its contents was ever revealed to Congress."

He quoted from the report, signed by Maj. Truman Smith, the attache, as follows:

"The astounting growth of German air power from a zero level to its present status in a brief four years must be accounted one of the most important world events of our time. If any foreign country feels self-satisfied in the matter of superiority of its training, it will receive a rude awakening in the not too distant future."

The report placed German air force sertngth on November 1, 1937, at from 175 to 225 squadrons, with 2400 first line planes. It estimated Luftwaffe personnel at from 80,000 to $10,000.

Engel, a member of the subcommittee on War Department appropriations, said that despite "insistent warnings" the President "consistently reduced" War Department appropriations, and added:

"When our Military Attache in Berlin reported that 'Germany is once more a world power in the air' just what did President Roosevelt do? He reduced the War Department's requested appropriation by 40 million dollars for the following year. He continued reductions in the years prior to Pearl Harbor."

From 1935 to 1941, Engel said, the President "cut War Department requested appropriations by $833,827,456 and Congress appropriated $253,588,695 more than the Chief Executive asked."

He said that he acquired the year-by-year breakdown of War Department requests for funds after Chairman Clarence Cannon, (D., Mo.), of the Approphiations Committee, "locked it in a safe where it remained sequestered for two and one half years."

Shelves Exclusive Referral System After Protests

By Ben W. Gilbert

Becoming noticeably jittery over the failure of some critical lagging programs to meet production schedules, officials of the War Manpower Commission considered adopting a drastic "exclusive referral" plan to staff these plants and then decided to abandon the idea in favor of intensified use of existing controls, ti was learned yesterday.

The "exclusive referral" plan would have given WMC area officials power to deny employment to workers refusing to accept a job assignment in a designated plant on the "critical" list. But, regional officials, at a meeting in St. Louis, turned thumbs down. Orders were sent out to scrap it.

Meanwhile, WMC issued three press releases to explain why the Nation is still faced with acute manpower shortages. Some officials interpreted the unprecedented barrage from WMC's information department as a reply to press conference assertions by J. A. Krug, chairman of the War Production Board, and Hiland Batcheller, WPB chief of operations, that certain programs are lagging because of manpower difficulties.

Troubles Outlined

Among the reasons advanced by Manpower Chief Paul V. McNutt for current troubles are the following:

1. Seasonal loss of two million workers between July and September as result of students and teachers giving up vacation jobs, women workers quitting to become housewives, and employes, believing the war is almost over, who quit in search of nonwar employment.

2. A high rate of absenteeism which can indirectly be traced to "over-optimism."

3. Cutbacks causing workers to leave the labor force.

4. Concentration of the tank industry in areas of current and anticipated labor shortages, making recruitment for the expanded tank program difficult.

Heavy Ammunition Problem

In a statement on the heavy artillery ammunition program, which he cited as typical, McNutt said:

"Thus far, manpower has been of only secondary importance. The major factor has been the lack of production facilities. These facilities, however, are now nearing completion and as soon as completed must be staffed. Many of them are already suffering from lack of workers. In the very near future manpower or the lack of it will be a decisive factor in the success of this program."

On the tank program, he said: "Although manpower has been adequate in the past, future prospects are not promising. The firms are located in areas already suffering from a scarcity of workers. In-plant transfers are expected to help to a limited extent, but it is improbable that this method will net the required number of workers and outside recruitment will be necessary."

McNutt said full production of the M-36 tank destroyer and a modified medium tank, "both considered exceptionally urgent by the War Department, was not scheduled to get under way until the first of October." Four of the nine plants affected lost manpower in August, however, WMC said.

Germany Waging 'Demographic' War Elmer Davis Says

Richmond, Va., Oct. 24 (AP). — Efforts of Germany to so weaken her negihbors that they would never be able to resist if Germany strikes again for world domination will make post-war Europe a "bleaker and poorer place than it has been for centuries," Elmer Davis told a War and Community Fund meeting here today.

"The most recent conspicuous display of this policy has been the flooding with sea water of almost half the area of the Netherlands —a policy designed not only to kill off as many Dutchmen as possible now by starvation and privation, but to make living as difficult as possible after the war for those Dutchmen who are left, to reduce the population, to weaken the economic strength of those who survive, to do all htat Germans can to insure that on the northwestern frontier, any future German aggression could not successfully be resisted," the Office of War Information director said.

"This is only the latest instance of what is euphemistically termed demographic wara systematic endeavor to reduce the populations of neighboring countries, in order that German strength, however it may be weakened by war losses, will still be relatively superior."

Egyptian Envoy Gives Up Career To Wed Teacher

London, Oct. 24 (AP).—Egypt's scholarly ambassador to the Court of St. James's, 55-year-old Dr. Hassan Nachat asha, gave up his diplomatic career today for love. He married a 23-year-old English school teacher.

Egyptian law required that he resign his country's No. 1 ambassadorial post because none of its diplomats is permittel to have a foreign wife.

His bride, tall, slim Patricia Mary Pansy Priest, formerly conducted a nursery school in Devonshire. She has become a Moslemand agreed to go to Cairo to make their home.

King Zog of Albania was the bridegroom's best manand Queen Geraldine was an attendant of the bride.

24th Corps By-Passed Yap To Hit Leyte

U. S. Twenty-fourth Army Corps Headquarters, Southern Leyete, Oct. 21.—(Delayed.) (U.P.).—American troops were preparing last month to invade the Japanese air and naval base of Yap in the Caroline Islands but a switch in Pacific strategy brought them to the Philippines instead, it may now be disclosed.

The troops were members of Maj. Gen. John Reed Hodge's Twenty-fourth Corps, now fighting on the southern end of the Leyte Line. They loaded aboard transports in Hawaii last month with their mission the capture of Yap, which lies 800 miles southeast of here.

However, Pacfiic strategy was altered and the Twenty-fourth Corps was assigned to Gen. Douglas MacArthus for the Philippines landing.

(Yap since has been by-passed by American conquest of Ngulu Island, 75 miles to the southeast and Ulithi, 100 miles to the northeast, as well as occupation of the southern Palau Islands, 325 miles to the southeast and Ulithi, 100 miles to the northeast, as well as occupation of the southern Palau Islands, 325 miles to the southwest. Ngulu was occupied October 15 and Ulithi September 20-21.)

iWth General MacArthur, Leyte Islanrs, Philippines, Oct. 20 (Via Army,Radio) (Delayed) (U.P.).—Four thousand armed and organized guerillas, including a few Americans, aided in preparations for the landing of United States forces on Leyte Island and will join with the Yanks in battling the Japanese.

The guerillas were led by Col Ruperto Kangelon, a Filipino, Second in command is a former United States PT boat skipper.

The guerillas collected detailed information as to Japanese strenbth and dispositions before the invasion. This information was transmitted fully to American headquartersby secret means. A twpical report, for example, might describe a certain point of land and reveal the four Japanese there had a machine gun.

The guerillas were given a schedule of operations in advance of the landing to permit them to evacuate civilians from threatened areas and to forewarn them when to go into action. Discussing this phase of preparations, Gen. Douglas MacArthur said we may lose a few more men in the actual land? ing but the ultimate benefits will far outweigh any loss of surprise which may result.

New Hellcat Whipping Zero At Ratio As Great As 31 To 1

By George Connery

The Navy yesterday turned out a report on its newest model of the Grumman Hellcat fighters, disclosing that they have destroyed thousands of German tanks and other vehicles and are whipping Jap planes at a ratio that in some cases mounts to 31 to 1.

In action for several months, the newest Hellcat (F6F-5) was described as faster than its predecessor, the F6F-3, easier to handle, particularly at high speeds, and more sturdy in construction.

Its most startling performance, the Navy said, was in a recent carrier strike against Two Jima in the Bonin Islands, when a squadron composed mostly of G6G-5s shot 33 of 40 Zeros while losing only two pilots and four of its own planes.

Can Outrun Zeros

"Pilots report that it handles beautifully in a dive and in rolls, takes off nicely from carrier desks and can be catapulted smoothly, "the Navy said." It can outrun Zeros at any altitude, although the Jap fighter still holds an advantage in rate of climb and radius of turn because of its light weight."

In armament the new Hellcat is identical to the older, mounting six .50 caliber machinegun and equipped to carry rockets and a heavy bomb load. Its six principal improvements are:

1. The engine cowling has been further streamlined for more speed.

2. Paint has been changed to a mirror-smooth finish, increasing speed and providing effective camouflage when seen from above the ocean.

3. New allerons make for greater maneuverability at high speeds.

Given Greater Visibility

4. Two metal braces have been removed from the old windshield providing greater visibility and the tail and stabilizer structures have been strengthened to allow for higher diving speeds and more violent pull-outs.

5. A larger sheet of armor-plate behind the cockpit affords the pilot greater protection from enemy fire.

The 6F6-5s is something more than 600 miles per hour.

Based on the carriers Tulagi and Kasaan Bay, some of them gove close support to American troops landing in Southern France and blasted the Germans on their retreat northward.

The Tulagi's squadron destroyed 487 enemy motor vehicles, 23 locomotives and 195 railway cars.

Got All Planes Sighted

In southern France also the Hellcats cut five bridges, sank a score of trawlers, touched off two ammunition dumps and 22 fuel tanks. They shot down only six German planes—but that was all they saw.

In the Pacific the Japs felt the sting of the latest Hellcats at Saipan, Guam, the Philippines and elsewhere. Planes from one of the squadrons sank two Jap destroyers near the Bonins.

Plane Flies To Eire In Record 14¼ Hours

New York, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—An American Export Airlines Flying Ace piloted by Capt. Charles F. Blair, jr. of Manhasset, N. Y., set a new transatlantic record yesterday when it landed at Foynes, Eire, 14 hours and 17 minutes after departure from LaGuardia Field, James M. Eaton, vice president of the company, announced today. The previous record was 15 hours and 30 minutes.

Roosevelt Ends Martial Law In Hawaii

By the Associated Press

With the lifting of martial law in Hawaii yesterday by Presidential proclamation, civil government ruled in that territory for the first time since the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

The proclamation also restored the right of habeas corpus in Hawaii, continued suspension of which had created a controversy between military and civilian officials.

President Roosevelt simultaneously issued an Executive Order directing Secretary of War Stimson to designate a military commander for Hawaii and authorize the commander to prescribe the territory or any part as a military area whenever military necessity exists.

In his proclamation lifting martial law the President said "The public safety no longer requires that the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus remain suspended or that martial law continue . . . "

Suspension of the writs of habeas cohpus led to a conflict between Federal Judge Delbert E. Metzger and Lieut. Gen. Robert C. Richardson, jr., commanding general of the Army's Hawaiian Department.

Judge Metzger had ruled that if the jurisdiction of civil courts in the islands was restored in part, as was done in 1943, it must be restored in full, including the right to grant a habeas corpus writ.

When Richardson refused to honor such a writ Metzger fined him $5000 for contempt of court. The General replied with a military order, which he later rescinded, prohibiting trial of habeas corpus cases and prescribing a fine of $5000 for judges disregarding his order.

The President since has pardoned General Richardson.

British Army Paper Joins Attack on Actors

New Delhi, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—The British army newpaper Contact today praised its American counterpart, the CBI Roundup, for criticizing Hollywood entertainers who find the Far Eastern theater too "rugged," and asserted the same criticism applies to many British stage, screen and radio performers.

Contact said it "frankly doubted" that British entertainers had tried very hard to get transportation to India and charged that only a half-dozen or so had visited this theater in five years of war.

Hurricane Cost Florida 50 Million Crop Loss

Jacksonville, Oct. 24 (AP).—Florida's fruit, vegetable and commercial flower growers suffered an estimated loss of 50 million dollars from last week's hurricane, a survey disclosed today.

The report figured 25 million dollars on-the-tree loss for fruit growers; 15 million dollars for vegetable and flower producers and approximately 10 million dollars more in damage to trees and groves.

Education Level Of GI Today 4 Years Above That of 1917

The average GI of this war has received about four more years of education than the doughboy of World War I, a survey by the Office of War Information revealed yesterday.

Quoting statistics gathered by the United States Office of Education, Federal Security Agency and the War Department, the OWI stated that the average soldier of this war has acquired a grade school education and completed the first two years of high school. The average World War I serviceman acquired a sixth grade grammar school education, OWI said.

23.3 Per Cent Graduates

In this war, OWI said, 23.3 per cent of the soldiers had completed four years of high school, while only 3.5 per cent in the last war had done so.

The number who completed no more than the first four years of grammar school in this war amounted to 3.5 per cent, compared to 24.4 per cent in 1917.

Only 1 per cent of the last war's soldiers completed four years of college, compared to 3.6 per cent in this war.

Detailed Comparison

A percentage table, comparing Army enlisted men of this war and of the last war on the basis of the amount of formal education they had received, follows:

	This War	Last War
College
4 years and over	3.6	1.0
3 years	2.0	0.8
2 years	4.0	1.3
1 year	6.3	1.5
High School
4 years	23.3	3.5
3 years	11.2	3.4
2 years	10.9	4.3
1 year	7.8	3.4
Grade School
8 to 5 years	27.4	35.3
4 to 0 years	3.5	34.4

'Franking' Abuse Laid to D'Alesandro

Baltimore, Oct. 24 (AP).—Ensign John W. Benson, Republican "kiss campaigner" for United States in the Third Maryland District, opened what he called the serious stage of his campaign today with a charge that Representative D'Alesandro (D., Md.) has "abused his franking privilege."

D'Alesandro, incumbent running for reelection against the Maritime Service purser who won his nomination while on duty in the Mediterranean, countered immediately with a challenge to Benson to take the charge to the United States district attorney.

Benson started his campaign recently with an offer to swap kisses for votes, and enlisted the aid of a young lady as "assistant kisser in charge of male voters."

80 Injured in Crash Of New Orleans Trains

New Orleans, La., Oct. 24 (U.P.).—More than 80 persons were injured today when the Illinois Central "Louisiane," bound for Chicago, crashed into the rear of the Southern Pacific Railroad's "Sunset Limited," bound for Texas, in a heavy fog at the city limits here.

Physicians and nurses worked for hours attending cuts and bruises of scores shaken up in the crash. Less than a dozen of the injured required hospitalization. Neither train overturned.

isters, or a sort of second Dumbarton Oaks session.

Stettinus said it may be possible to send out invitations in December for the January gathering.

Before the Dumbarton Oaks Conferences, the State Department had hoped the international meeting could be held this fall. Stettinius noted that the Dumbarton Oaks talks had lasted about a month longer than expected and ended in an incomplete plan.

If the United Nations approve the Dumbarton Oaks plan, possibly with modifications, in a January conference, it is expected to take several months to get the treaty ratified. After ratification, some time will be required to set up the organization physically.

Presidential Poll Close In Arlington

It certainly looks like the presidential race in Arlington County will be close; that is, if the result of a straw poll can be taken as indicative.

A preliminary count of straw votes cast at the "voting poll" recently set up in the county court house showed yesterday that Roosevelt had 28 votes, Dewey 27.

The votes were counted by William A. Linsay, teller for Roosevelt, and Mrs. L. M. Gilbert, teller for Dewey. The ballot box will be opened again October 31, and the final count will be made November 4.

Some Arlington County Republicans, yesterday said they were certain it would be a close race, but Democrats, who regard their county as a stronghold of the party, said, "it won't be like this on election day!"

Between four and five hundred votes are expected in the straw ballot before the poll finally closes. Any county registered voter may vote in the poll, it was declared.

Recreation Club Sought

The Cherrydale Citizens' Association voted Monday night to request establishment of a junior recreational club in the Cherrydale school house.

The association noted a lack of organized youth recreation and voted to take its request to W. A. Richardson, director of recreation for Arlington County schools.

The association approved plans for a public meeting at which candidates for congressional and county offices may speak. The meeting will be held November 1, in the fire hall.

Two representatives of the Cherrydale Volunteer Fire Association appeared to protest what they called a "reflection" on their department, cast by the citizens association's motion at its last meeting to ask for additional police patrols on the nights the fire association held benefit dances.

The fire department representative declared that any noisy or disorderly conduct on such nights occurred after their dances, and not during them; the citizens' association members countered by declaring that their motion had not been meant as a reflection on the fire department, and that the situation had improved since their action last month.

Charles Cobbins is president of the Cherrydale Association, which meets again, November 27.

Larceny Trial Today

Two District residents, a man and a woman, will be araigned in Arlington County Court this morning on charges of grand larcency.

They are Loraine Miller, 709 D st. nw., and John Slaughter, 922 22d st. nw., who, according to police, have admitted entering the home of W. D. Lucas, 1026 N. Randoph st., Arlington, the past weekend. They were captured by county ploce, who recovered all property listed by Lucas as missing from his home. Among the articles recovered was an eight-day clock, valued at $150, the top of which was fashioned in the form of the crown of England.

Two Going to Hawaii

Two Arlington women, employes of the office of the Quartermaster General, will leave shortly for Hawii, where the will be asigned to an air base. They are Mrs. Genevieve E. Cunningham, 1920 N.. Lexington st., and Miss Milena Valeri, 821 N. Lincoln st.

Mrs. Cunningham is the wife of Corpl. James T. Cunningham, also of Arlington, who was stationed at Pearl aHrbor at the time of thhe Japanese attack. He is now in the China-Burma-India theater.

Miss Valeri came to Washington from Hobing, Minn.

Harvest Show Tonight

The Woodlawn Garden Club is sponsoring a Harvest Show tonight from 8 until 10 in the recreation room of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Souder, 4912 North 16th st. Canned fruits and vegetables will be judged by Mrs. Harriett R. Gordon, county home demonstration agent. Mrs. W. R. Chatline, of the Farm and Garden Association, will judge the artistic arrangements.

All exhibits must be in their place not later than 7 o'clock tonight.

Legion to Plan Dance

American Legion Post No. 139 will meet tonight at 8 at the Legion Hall on North Washington boulevard to complete plans for the annual Armistice Day dance November 10, at the Army-Navy Country Club.

Proceeds will go to reduce indebtedness on the Club House.

The 28-year-old dreadnaught served with the Nevada and Utah as Battleship Division Six, based at Verehaven, Ireland, to meet the threat of the German high seas fleet.

50 Sailors Convicted, Refused to Load Ship

San Francisco, Oct. 24 (AP).—A courtmartial board today brought in a "guilty" verdict for the 50 Negro soldiers who refused to load ammunition following the Port Chicago disaster last July, but whether the men must pay the penalty for mutiny or a lesser offense was not determined.

Mutiny can be punished by death, but the lesser charge of "conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline" carries a maximum penalty of 15 years.

Church Needs City's Brains, Minister Says

Dr. Philip Jones, associate pastor of the Madison Avenue (New York) Presbyterian Church, and advocate of modernized church methods, said yesterday that "Washington has plenty of brains but not enough devoted to the tasks of the church and Sunday School."

Leading a symposium at Asbury Methodist Church, 11th and K sts. nw., in the National Mission to Christian Teachers, Dr. Jones said "the intelligence of the congregation must be mustered to thte task" of serving the church school, in the face of decreasing enrollment.

Dr. Jones also addressed a mass meeting last night at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 9th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw., where the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of the Washington Episcopal Diocese, presided, and Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of Fifst Baptist Church, conducted a consecration service, formally closing the Mission here.

Sharing the program with Dr. Jones at Asbury Church were Miss Ruth Murphy and Dr. Mary Leigh Palmer, of the International Council of Religious Education, and Dr. Edward Staples, of the youth division, Methodist board of education. Presiding were the Rev. George E. Schnabel, church evangelism department, and the Rev. Robert K. Nevitt, chairman, religious education committee, Washington Federation of Churches sponsor of the mission locally.

Montgomery Conuty OCD Casualty Stations Are Relocated

Casualty stations located in schools in the Takoma Park-Silver Spring and Bethesda-Chevy Chase areas will be consolidated and relocated at the Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park and Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, Judge Albert E. Brault, director of Montgomery County OCD, informed the Board of County Commissioners yesterday.

Material and equipment in the Montgomery Hills Junior High, Montgomery Blair Senior High and the Takoma Junior High will be removed today, he said. Telephones which were installed for those casualty stations, Judge Brault told the board, have been ordered removed at once. This will save the county 15 a month for three phones.

As soon as arrangements can be completed for the transfer of equipment from Bethesda-Chevy Chase elementary schools telephones there also will be discontinued. Discontinuance of the Rockville phone at the Report Center is saving $7, Brault said.

War Recreation Dance

The first dance of the season under auspices of the Officers Committee of the Montgomery County War Recreation Services will be held tomorrow at Woodmont Country Cuub, Bethesda, from 9 p. m. to midnight.

Rear Admiral William Chambers, USN, new commandant of the Naval Medical Center, and Mrs. Chambers will be guests of honor. All officers living or stationed in the county are welcome to attend, according to George Mathews, chairman of the committee.

Presidents of the Civitan, Rotary, Lions, and veterans organizations will be among the guests of honor.

Charter Discussion

Residents of the Clarksburg district in Upper Montgomery County will meet Friday at 8 p. m. in the Clarksburg School to hear discussions on the proposed charter form of government for the county which will be voted upon by county residents at the November 7 election.

Speakers will include Judge Albert Brault, secretary-treasurer of the Citizens' Committee to Defeat Charter, State's Attorney Joseph B. Simpson, jr.; Assistant State's Attorney Alfred D. Noyes, Bowie Waters and James Pugh, both attorneys, Leslie Carlin, chairman of the election precinct, will preside.

Silver Spring Hospital

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Silver Spring Hospital Association, Inc., and the captains who will direct the campaign to raise $700,000 for the erection of a 100-bed hospital, will be held Friday at 8 p. m. in the County Building.

Also meeting with the group will be James McCann and his workers covering the No. 2 Precinct, which comprises the business district. Plans for the drive will be explained. Selection of captains for 20 precincts has not been completed as yet, Mrs. Virginia Klopp, executive secretary, stated yesterday.

Group Favors Charter

The Westmoreland Citizens Association has voted by a large majority to go on record as favoring the adoption of the proposed charter for Montgomery County, Morris J. McCarthy, president, announced yesterday.

Nearly 100 residents of the area attended a meeting Monday night. The association urged the citizens in the area to vote in favor of the charter on November 7. Postwar planning, the proposed amendments to the Maryland constitution, were discussed and plans for the new Mount Pleasant Congregational Church were explained by Dr. Fred Buschmeyer, pastor.

G.W.U. Bulletin Pays Tribute To Dr. Ruffin

This month's issue of the George Washington University news bulletin is dedicated by Persident Cloyd H. Marvin to Dr. Sterling Ruffin "as a distinguished practitioner and able teacher of medicine, (who) has contributed greatly to the Medical School, and through it to the Washington community."

Dr. Ruffin graduated from the University in 1890, and served as professor of medicine from 1902 to 1924 when he was given the rank of Professor Emeritus. In 1932 the University conferred upon him the honorary degree, Doctor of Science.

The October bulletin consists of an article on Cost of Distribution for Essential Products by Robert E. Freer, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission and Trustee of the University. "Our larger manufacturing, processing and transportation companies will emerge from this war generally in a strong financial condition so that they can turn their attention to developing a more efficient and therefore cheaper system of distribution," Chairman Freer writes.

Falls Church Budget Slated For Formal Adoption Tonight

Arlington-Fairfax Bureau, The Post, 1430 N. Buchanan St. Tel. CH. 3239.

A special meeting of the Falls Church Town Council will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in the town hall at which time the 1944-45 budget, approved at the last regular meeting, is scheduled to be adopted. The budget calls for the same tax rate of $1.40 general, with 10 cents additional for fire protection. The tax on merchants' capital will be 38 cents, with 3 cents added for fire protection, and the bank stock tax will be 80 per cent of the amount levied by the State.

There also will be a general discussion of zone and planning plans.

3 Zoning Pleas Approved

Three applications for exceptions to the county zoning ordinance have been approved by the Fairfax County Board of Zoning Appeals, it was announced yesterday.

The board has granted permission to the Lorton Telephone Co. to rebuild an exchange at Engleside which recently had been destroyed by fire, has granted permission to W. J. Hardy to erect a garage at Ravenwood, with less setback than is specified in the ordinance, and taken similar action in approving the application of Lloyd E. Smith to erect an addition to a store building in Annandale.

Council Again To Weigh Plan For Home Rule

Baltimore, Oct. 24 (AP).—Controversial "home rule" legislation under which county commissioners would receive considerable extension of powers will come up for possibly the final hearing before the Legislative Council tomorrow.

The council, which is sharply divided on the proposals, is not expected to reach a decision whether to recommend the bill to the 1945 General Assembly.

Sentiment Divided

Previously, the council had sampled opinion of far western Maryland and Eastern Shore county commissioners. Here, also, sentiments were divided, some Eastern Shore spokesmen opposing the suggestion that commissioners be given power to fix salaries of such elected officials as sheriffs and judges of orphans' courts.

The principal reason extended by protagonists for the bill is that it would help clear the General Assembly agenda of great quantities of local legislation which is held responsible for last minute crushes before adjournment.

All county commissioners and their attorneys have been invited to attend tomorrow's session.

More County Powers

The plan as now being considered by the council includes granting to the commissioners increased borrowing powers, greater control of various county offices and officers, authority to buy and sell real estate and to fix payment rates for care of prisoners in county jails.

Thursday's session will be given over to several hearings, including those for postmortem examiners, State Hospital for the Blind, small loans commissioner and a report from the special subcommittee on school bus regulation.

The conservation committee, headed by Senator Wilmer C. Carter (D., Baltimore 3d), will go to Solomons Friday to inspect the State's biological laboratory and hear a request for expanded recreational facilities.

Court Plan Vote Urged

Baltimore, Oct. 24 (AP).—Marylanders had appeals from two prominent Baltimoreans today that they vote for the proposal to reorganize the Court of Appeals at the November 7 election.

Judge Morris A Soper of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals said in the first of a series of six broadcasts by State officials and others that "no politics are involved, and no selfish interest will be served by its passage."

Judge Soper, citing what he called seven surprises in the plan, said they "all lead up to one question—why was this thing not done long ago?"

G. C. A Anderson, former president of the Baltimore Bar Association, told members of the local district of the Federation of Women's Clubs that "five judges can work together better than eight—particularly since the eight under the present setup have to hear arguments in the Court of Appeals and then disperse to do trial work in their separate circuits."

The proposed constitutional amendment would reduce the Court of Appeals from eight to five members, relieve the judges of trial work and make slight changes in their method of selection.

'Flying Boxcar' In Production At Hagerstown

MILITARY SECRECY surrounding production of the Army Air Forces' latest and most unique cargo plane was lifted this week with release of the above picture of the Fairchild "Packet," designated the C-82, now in production at the company's factories in Hagerstown, Md. Designed for carrying tanks and other heavy supplies, the plane has been dubbed the "Flying Boxcar" by technicians. The plane was said to be easily convertible into a 75-passenger transport or aerial freighter in peacetime

L. C. Spengler Is Dead at 72; C. & O. Official

Newport News, Va., Oct. 24 (AP).—Luther Campbell Spengler, 72, assistant general superintendent, Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Co., died at his home here today.

A veteran member of the Chesapeake and Ohio, Spengler had been employed by the company approximately 50 years. He had been inactive for the past two and half years because of ill health.

Spengler entered the Chesapeake and Ohio as a telegraph operator and rose to the position of superintendent of the Newport News and Norfolk Terminal Division before being made assistant superintendent of the company.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary Theobald Spengler, of this city; a son, Lieut. Comdr. Luther C. Spengler, jr., USNR, who recently returned from duty in battle areas to be located at the Naval Hospital in Portsmouth. Also surviving are four sisters, Mrs. Bowman Clark, Culpeper, Mrs. Edith Hord, Grayson, Ky., Mrs. W. N. Link, Washington, and Mrs. Nell Midkiff, of Baltimore.

Charles A. Yontz

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 24 (Spl.).—Charles Albert Yontz, 67, water superintendent in this city for some years until retiring July 1, a native and lifelong resident of the city, died at a local hospital Sunday after a brief illness. Surviving are the wife, formerly Miss Anna Bell Heck; two sons, Bruce M., Baltimore, and Lieut. Charles A. Yontz, of the U. S. Navy; one daughter, Mrs. George Engle, this city; one brother, George Yontz, Norfolk, Va.; and one sister, Mrs. Robert W. Stewart, this city. Services were held up pending word from the son in service.

Mrs. Jean B. Gelion

Richmond, Va., Oct. 24 (AP).—Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m., Wednesday for Mrs. Jean Blair Gelion of Rockbridge Baths, former Richmonder, who died Monday in a New York City hospital. Mrs. Helion, daughter of the late Lewis H. Blair and Mrs. Blair, was educated here and at Sweet Briar College and in Paris. In Europe, she was presented at the Court of St. James. She is survived by a son, Lewis Blair Helion; her mother, and six sisters and brothers.

Charter Issued For Swannanoa Resort Company

Richmond, Va., Oct. 24 (AP).—Owners of "Swannanoa," Blue Ridge Mountain show place, today obtained a charter for a corporation to be known as "Skyline Swannanoa, Inc."

The charter states that the corporation will be empowered to operate buildings for hotels, apartment houses, clubhouses, restaurants, lunch and tearooms, barber shops, billiard halls, golf courses, polo fields, landing fields and swimming pools. It has a maximum capitalization of $300,000 and a minimum of $60,000 with stock divided into $5 shares.

Officers of the corporation, all of Charlottesville, are Edwin Hyde, president; A. T. Dulaney, vice president; Dr. W. D. Haden, vice president; J. Gordon Lindsay, secretary and treasurer, all directors, also. Other directors are C. F. Cassell, Harry Frazier, jr., W. S. Hildreth, S. A. Jessup, John S. Graves, and S. Emmett Gleason.

The one-million-dollar estate was built in 1912 by the late Maj. James H. Dooley, Richmond, an a 900-acre tract near Afton, in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

2 Die in Harrisonburg Of Highway Mishaps

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 24 (AP).—Two deaths from highway accidents occurred here yesterday.

Clifton Edward Layman, 16, son of H. A. Layman of Mayland, died early in the morning, shortly after he had been struck by a truck as he was riding his bicycle across the road, near his home.

Everett Heaton, 23, a Norfolk shipyard worker, formerly of Elkton, died in a hospital from injuries received Saturday night when his automobile crashed into a bridge on the east side highway near Elkton. His wife is still in the hospital being treated for injuries.

338 Md. Veterans of This War Being Educated at U. S. Cost

Baltimore, Oct. 24 (AP).—Approximately 338 Maryland World War II veterans enrolled in 23 schools and colleges throughout the State are training to be virtually everything from aeronautical engineers to concert violinists, an Associated Press survey showed today.

These former service men and women have taken advantage of the Government financed educational program included in the "G. I. Bill of Rights."

Sixty of the 338 Marylanders are disabled as a result of service-incurred injuries.

Michael J. Keating of the vocational and educational rehabilitation service division of the United States Veterans Administration Maryland headquarters in Baltimore said today that more than 85 per cent of the applications filed by former members of the armed forces for education in approved Free State institutions had been granted.

Choose Own Courses

The men and women may select their own course at any educational institution which accepts them as qualified, provided the school is on the list approved by the Veterans' Administration, he explained.

The discharged service personnel have registered for widely divergent courses of study at various academic colleges and universities in Maryland. They have started classes in medicine, dentistry, pharmacy, law, theology, education, sociology and various other fields.

Twenty-two have enrolled at the Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore and six at the Johns Hopkins Medical School.

The University of Maryland has by far the largest number—a total of 130. Fifty-nine of this number have entered at College Park. The remainder have registered at the medical, law, dentistry and pharmacy departments of the university in Baltimore.

Two to Be Ministers

Other colleges where service people have enrolled include Loyola, Baltimore, 5; Morgan State Teachers' College, Baltimore, 6; University of Baltimore, 12; Washington College, Chestertown, 1, and Western Maryland College, Westminster, 2.

Two of the veterans—one at Western Maryland and another at Johns Hopkins—have begun studying to be ministers.

Those seeking technical or business training have registered in institutions offering these types of courses. Radio has attracted a comparatively large number of the discharged servicemen—17 have enrolled at the Commercial Radio Institute in Baltimore. Two air-minded veterans have begun training at the School of Aeronautics in Rockville, Md. One has entered the American Business College, one Strayer's Business College and another the Eaton and Burnett Business College, all at Baltimore. Five have started at the Baltimore Young Men's Christian Association Business College and five at the Baltimore College of Commerce.

Two veterans have enrolled in the Berlitz School of Languages, Baltimore. Five have started art courses at the Maryland Institute, Baltimore.

At the Peabody Conservatory of Music, Baltimore, one of the five registered former servicemen has elected a program of study in violin.

Two in High Schools

One of the Marylanders taking advantage of the Government-financed program has enrolled at the Flintstone High School in Cumberland and another at Mount St. Joseph High in Baltimore.

The Veterans' Administration will finance one year of training, or a year's equivalent in part-time study. If the courses are completed satisfactorily, the veteran will be entitled to additional education not to exceed the length of time spent in active service.

The Government will pay the cost of tuition as well as other expenses including laboratory, library and infirmary fees, not in excess of $500 for an ordinary school year.

A subsistence allowance of $30 a month for a veteran with no dependents and of $75 a month for one with dependents will be provided.

Capt. Patch Died In 'Minor' Action; Shot by Tank Gun

With the U. S. Seventh Army, France, Oct. 24 (U.S.).—The small, unheadlined warfare which appears in communiques as "improved positions," "slight gains," or "repulsed enemy counterattacks," killed Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's 24-year-old son Sunday east of Luneville.

Capt. Alexander M. Patch 3d, only son of the Seventh Army commander, was shot by a 77-mm. tank gun while leading his infantry company in an attack. It was the same company he had led in the capture of Cherbourg and in the drive across France. In September, he came under his father's command.

Patch was buried yesterday in a U. S. Army military cemetery a few miles from Seventh Army headquarters. His father and staff officers were present.

State Medical Society Names New Officers

Richmond, Va., Oct. 24 (AP).—The Medical Society of Virginia today elected Dr. Julian L. Rawls of Norfolk as its president-elect to take office in 1945, and selected the following vice presidents:

Dr. Harvey B. Haag of Richmond, Dr. P. S. Smith of Abingdon and Dr. William R. Whitman of Roanoke. The society agreed to hold its 1945 convention at Roanoke.

Dr. H. B. Mulholland of the University of Virginia, who was elected president-elect last year, will be installed in the presidency tomorrow, succeeding a plan for prepayment of medical and surgical care—especially for persons in the lower-income brackets.

Counselors Chosen

New counselors elected today included Dr. C. L. Harrell of Norfolk, for the Second District; Dr. J. L. Hamner of Mannboro, for the Fourth District; Dr. J. R. Gorman of Lynchburg, for the Sixth District, and Dr. J. E. Knight of Warrenton, for the Eighth District.

Proper precautionary measures will prevent to a considerable extent occupational skin diseases found among workers who come in contact with explosives, either in manufacturing them or loading them in military weapons, Dr. James Q. Gant of the United States Public Health Service told the society today.

His talk, covering the dermatological problems which have arisen in the munitions industry during the present war, was one of the main features of the second day of the annual convention.

Basing his talk on studies made in many munitions plants by the dermatoses section of the industrial hygiene division of the U. S. Public Health Service, Dr. Gant covered the various explosives now being manufactured in the United States, and described the types of dermatitus which are most likely to occur.

Slows Down Output

"The importance of occupational skin diseases in slowing down production is not generally appreciated," he pointed out. "Among workers in certain types of munitions manufacturing, dermatitis is the most frequent of occupational disease. From 2 to 50 per cent of all new workers handling explosives, such as tetryl, develop dermatitis after five or more days of work," Dr. Gant declared.

The patient who has recovered from a severe dermatitis caused by explosives is likely to remain highly sensitive and should not continue in the same type of industrial exposure, Dr. Gant advised.

Mumps Outbreak Isolates 325 Farm Workers

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 24 (Spl.).—Barbados Islanders brought here to help harvest apples were sent to isolation and treatment for a scourge of mumps, with complications, at the Army's Newton D. Baker General Hospital here yesterday afternoon by arrangement with the Army and hospital authorities after Dr. G. P. Morison, county health officer, held the camp facilities where the men have been quartered unsatisfactory.

They are being housed in a half-dozen buildings formerly used by the CCC and moved to the hospital, east of the city. The islanders are being kept isolated, and their sickness is being handled by local doctors.

The decisions to move the entire quota of about 325 men, who have been here since early in September, was made after consultation with the Army sources and after about 80 of the men had been quartered in the armory here over Sunday night temporarily.

It was questionable whether the men would be of any more service to the orchardists. They were billed to leave for other parts about November 1. They have been losing time because of sickness and also because of adverse weather for picking. Some of the orchards already have released their quota.

Convicted Va. Rapist Committed to Asylum

Winchester, Va., Oct. 24 (Spl.). Ralph Earl McClure, previously sentenced to three years in the State Penitentiary for attempted rape by a Corporation Court jury, has been committed to the Southwestern State Hospital at Marion, Va., instead.

Judge Harrison, who presided at the jury trial, called in a commission at his own volition. The physicians found that the local youth, discharged from the Army and guilty of the attempted rape of a six-year-old girl, was insane.

Storer College Seats Mckinney as Head

Harpers Ferry, W. Va., Oct. 24 (Spl.).—Dr. Richard Ishmael McKinney, former dean of theology at Virginia Union College, Richmond, Va., was president of Storer College for Negroes here today as a result of three days of ceremonies covering the weekend, climaxed by the formal inauguration. He is the first Negro to head the institution. He succeeds Dr. Henry T. McDonald.

City Patrolman Suspended in Hit-Run Case

Baltimore, Oct. 24 (AP).—A city police patrolman was under suspension from the force today pending disposition of charges he failed to stop after an accident in which a pedestrian was seriously injured.

M. Joseph Wallace, chief inspector of police, said Patrolman John C. Hudgins, of the northern district,, had been suspended pending disposition of charges of reckless driving and failure to stop after an accident.

His hearing on the charges was set today in traffic court for December 14.

Hudgins denied having struck the man, Wallace said. The pedestrian, Howard James, 64, was struck by an automobile as he alighted from a streetcar Sunday night, and witnesses said the auto did not stop. James suffered fractures of both legs and head injuries.

Patrolmen Charles P. Traynor and William Keller, who investigated, said parts of an automobile headlight and radiator grill found at the scene fitted damaged parts of the police car which Hudgins had been driving.

Wallace said Hudgins admitted driving down Falls Road, where the accident occurred, at the time of the incident. Hudgins admitted he was off his regular beat at the time, Wallace said.

Harvest Work Prevents Talk, Says Sen. Byrd

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 24 (AP).—Senator Byrd has advised Simon Sonnenberg, head of the Holt Street Independent Voters' League, that the harvesting of a "very large apple crop" will prevent him from addressing a public mass meeting on behalf of the fourth-term candidacy of President Roosevelt here October 31.

Sonnenberg, whose group will sponsor the Roosevelt-Truman-Daughton rally, said, "I feel that Senator Byrd is a great American and a great Virginian whose loyalty is unquestioned, but his action in not supporting Roosevelt is not keeping up with the times. In these days of great conflict a statesman must have full vision of the future, which apparently Mr. Byrd hasn't got. Without question some points on domestic issues he may be right on, but the foreign issue is the future of the country at this time. On it we stand or fall."

Mr. Byrd's message:

"In answer to your telegram, I regret to advise you that conditions are such here (Winchester) in connection with the harvesting of a very large apple crop that I am unable to accept your invitation. My three boys are in the service, and the burden of the work here has fallen entirely on me."

Middletown Driver Fined in Fatality

Frederick, Md., Oct. 24 (Spl).—Paul B. Marsh, 21, near Middletown, was fined $125 by Magistrate Edward J. Smith today in connection with an accident in which J. Paul Adams, near Middletown, was fatally injured. Marsh was found guilty of manslaughter with an automobile and failing to stop after an accident. It was testified that Marsh ra nover Adams early October 15 and continued to his home without assisting his victim, who was found some hours later by a passerby. Marsh's defense was that he thought he had run over a calf in the road.

New Pastor Appoined For Gainsboro Charge

Winchester, Va., Oct. 24 (Spl).—Dr. R. Orman Bryant, superintendent of the Winchester District, Methodist Church, has announced the appointment of the Rev. Herman Strawn as pastor of the Gainesboro charge effective in January. The Rev. Mr. Strawn is at present a student at the Boston School of Theology. He is a graduate of Mount Union College and Westminister Teological Seminary.

Cecil Farmers to Meet

Elkton, Md., Oct. 24 (AP).—Meetings to decide whether the sentiment among farmers and landowners is favorable for the creation of a soil conservation district in Cecil County will be held at Elkton Friday, at Cecilton Monday and at Rising Sun Tuesday.

Flemming Proposes Plan of 8 Benefits

New York.—An eight-point program that would benefit each Federal worker was outlined before the third constitutional convention of the United Federal Workers of America here yesterday by Arthur S. Flemming, Republican member of the Civil Service Commission. Immediately after Congress returns, he said, the commission will propose for its consideration:

(1) "Very careful reexamination of basic rates of pay which should take into consideration such factors as the cost of living, and also a frank consideration of just what the Government, as an employer, should do if it is to attract and hold the persons who will be needed to discharge the tremendous responsibilities which will rest upon Government in the postwar period." Flemming did not specify a flat percentage increase, but earlier the union demanded 15 per cent additional.

(2) "That Congress should pass legislation providing for uniform treatment of Federal employes on such matters as differential pay for night work and pay for holiday work. The present policy, he said, is 'very confusing.' Some are paid, others aren't.

(3) "That the waiting periods between automatic in-grade pay raises be cut from 30 and 18 months to 18 and 12 months.

(4) "That an adequate health and medical program be established for Federal workers.

(5) "That salaries of field employes be made uniform.

(6) "That greater emphasis be placed on personnel administration.

(7) "That the commission be given authority to hear appeals for all emplyoes, and

(8) "True overtime pay for white-collar workers."

The commissioner made a strong appeal to the employes to stay on the job until the war is won, no matter what personal sacrifices are involved. He explained that turnover had jumped a full per cent since May and he added, "That isn't an encouraging picture." It is true, he said, that the services of many persons now working for the Government will not be needed after the war, but, he explained, anyone who ceases to render such services must recognize that his quitting will almost surely result in unnecessary loss of life on the battlefronts.

This enthusiastic convention earlier heard a slam-bang political speech calling for the reelection of Roosevelt and a Democratic Congress by Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee. Ramspeck pointedly implied that the welfare of Federal workers depended upon a fourth term and the election of a liberal Democratic Congress. "I am perfectly willing to admit," he said, "that many Federal employes have not been treated on a basis of equity with employes in private industry. . . . Persons who work for the Government should get the same pay for the same work as employes in private industry." He went on to say that he approved of full overtime pay for Federal workers, but it was voted down in Congress. "What sort of legislation you get in the future," he said, "tdepends on the kind of Congress you elect on November 7. If it is as conservative as the present Congress, I think you cannot look for much beneficial legislation, not only for Federal workers but for private employers."

Ramspeck also charged that the Republicans, if they win, would place people in charge of New Deal agencies such as Social Security, National Labor Relations Board and other to operate them not for the purpose for which they are created, but in the interest of the employer class. He even said that the Republicans would not permit King and Marshall to keep their jobs "because we could say that the war was won by men picked by a Democratic rPesident." He also warned that if Roosevelt was defeated "you are voting out all those who are in key positions in his Administration, including that great American citizen—Cordell Hull."

Between speeches, the 150 delegates adopted resolutions that instructed the union to press its fight against that part of the Hatch Act which forbids Federal workers from participating actively in politics; condemned as "false economy" the reduction in personnel of the Project Service Division of Public Housing; urged that the Little Steel wage formula be broken; that the rights of veterans be fully protected; that the union give its full support to the war effort and the Comander in Chief; that Federal employes be permitted to retire on full anuity at 55 after 30 years' service; a postwar work wek of 5 days and 30 hours; that night workers be given a differential of 15 per cent; and characterized Harry Bridges, West Coast labor leader, as a model citizen without citizen's rights, and recommended that "'we ask the Comander in Chief to countermand Attorney General Biddle's decision and to declare the case of Harry Bridges closed."

FROM WASHINGTON . . . OWI is asking its employees who are entitled to veteran preference to establish such at once . . . Foreign Claims Commission of the War Department is authorized to process claims of civilian employees injured on duty in the Southwest Pacific Theater of Operations . . . Robert Lenhart, who wa sanalysis economist for the Committee on Congested Industrial Areas, has gone to CED . . . James C. Scully will replace Myron R. Holmgren as chief of the fuel rationing branch in the Washington office of OPA . . . Warren E. Hall, jr., is the new director of the OPA labor office . . . Thursday, October 26, is the date set for distribution of "Federal Agencies," a booklet put out by Citizens National Committee. It should be of use to any one interested in reorganizational work in the agencies.

Bahamians Leave Arundel for Florida

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 24 (AP).—Bahamian workers at the Harwood farm labor camp left today for Florida after completing the harvest of southern Anne Arundel County tobacco, corn and hay crops.

Isaac Shepherd, camp manager, said the 48 laborers were enthusiastic at the prospect of working in Florida.

"They're used to a hot climate and this cold, wet weather has been hard on them," Shepherd said. "One morning when there was a heavy frost some of them were so cold they couldn't talk."

Injured Railman Dies

Baltimore, Oct. 24 (AP).—Leonard Smelson, 37-year-old railroad fireman from Lutherville, Md., who fractured his skull when he fell out of an engine cab at the Pennsylvania station last Friday, died today at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Silence Would Be Better

With a perfectly straight face, and with monumental obliviousness to all that has happened during the past few years, the State Department now insists that the recognition at this time of the De Gaulle regime as the Provisional Government of France is an action "in harmony with its (i. e., the United States Government's) policy toward France as publicly enunciated from time to time by the President and the Secretary of State." We are to believe, in other words, that Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Hull and their advisers planned it all that way—that the recognition of the De Gaulle regime constitutes the triumph of their French policy instead of, as is actually the case, proof of its palpable failure.

Our French policy between the days of the Giraud fiasco—to go back no further—and the post-invasion period was based on certain premises now revealed to have had no validity. They were (1) that De Gaulle is a man of such dictatorial pretensions and vengeful ideas as to make it dangerous to extend any degree of recognition to his regime; (2) that he was not representative; hence that we must keep a free hand to deal with other groups after our troops had landed in France and (3) that the only way the wishes of the French people could be discovered was by holding a general election; hence that until such an election were held, no government in France should be recognized.

These premises speedily proved untenable after D-Day. It soon became clear that General de Gaulle was a man with keen political sense and a real instinct for democracy and its operations; that the French people did look to De Gaulle for leadership; and that it was impossible, until after French prisoners in Germany had been freed, to hold an election. This meant that postponement of recognition of the De Gaulle regime as a provisional government, instead of helping the French people and bolstering up France, could only hurt the French and weaken France. This fact was far more clearly recognized in London than in Washington. It was only when our French policy of the past had become discredited that we found it necessary to take the wise and logical, indeed inevitable, step of fully recognizing De Gaulle.

Probably it is asking too much of the State Department to expect its functionaries ever to confess to error. That being the case, the department should at least have succumbed to silence instead of laying claim to prescience or consistency.

Deluded Sex

Last week in Rochester, N. Y., a 14-year-old girl died of starvation, which is a rather rare thing, even in time of famine. The victims of prolonged malnutrition usually die of infectious diseases to which their enfeebled condition makes them an easy prey. But as far as we can make out from the newspaper reports, this child died almost literally of hunger. She had starved to the point where her heart and her kidneys could no longer function.

Now there is no famine in Rochester. The girl's parents were not destitute and were certainly not indifferent about her physical welfare. The girl had simply refused to eat because she was afraid of being fat. She was undergoing the difficult experience of puberty and had developed a sudden, though quite natural, interest in matters like marriage, babies and housekeeping. But she was rather large for her age, and had begun to fear that for this reason nobody would ever want to marry her. Where did she get this idea? She might have got it, and probably did get it, from a number of places where the gospel of the svelte, boyish figure is being industriously preached—from movies, from women's pages of newspapers, from the articles and advertisements in women's magazines, from insinuations in radio commercials, from descriptive passages by slick-paper fiction writers. Her family sent her to a doctor who found her somewhat overweight, and prescribed a diet of low caloric content. Whether this physician acted wisely in the circumstances we are not competent to say; yet the testimony of the girl's family is that after a couple of months of this diet she had lost 43 pounds.

Probably there were psychiatric overtones to this particular case. The child seems to have been suffering from what is called a "compulsion neurosis." Nevertheless, she was doing in an extreme way what thousands and probably millions of American women are doing on a smaller scale, to their rather severe physical damage. The dieting fad is apparently the result of a mass fallacy or delusion, the delusion that a minimum of flesh somehow makes a woman more appealing to the fleshly instincts of the other sex. The thing is not only not mathematically demonstrable, the great bulk of evidence is against it. To be convinced, all that is necessary is to take a good look at the well-fed Venus de Milo or the strapping Venus Praxiteles or the ladies in the secular paintings of Titian or Rubens, and compare them to the models in the shop windows or to the flat and fragile figures drawn by lady fashion-artists for Vogue and Harper's Bazaar.

Lend-Lease Accounts

A serious and, we think, valid charge has been leveled at the Lend-Lease Administration by the National Association of Manufacturers. It is pointed up by the observation of several Congressmen returning from London. In its publication, NAM News, the association asserts that a conflict rages between one group of officials which "feels we should expect a businesslike settlement for all lend-lease material that has a peacetime use" and another group which "believes we should cancel all lend-lease accounts, and even continue lend-lease after the war." As the NAM News points out, "hundreds of thousands of businesses in all countries of the world will be affected, for good or for bad, by the outcome of the struggle between these two groups—not to mention the American taxpayer."

The conflict, we believe, has a source common to most intragovernmental conflicts. It stems from a failure on the part of the President to lay down a definitive policy for the settlement of lend-lease accounts. In the letter of transmittal published with the eleventh lend-lease report a little over a year ago, Mr. Roosevelt said: "The Congress in passing and extending the Lend-Lease Act made it plain that the United States wants no new war debts to jeopardize the coming peace. Victory and a secure peace are the only coin in which we can be repaid." We believed, and stated editorially at the time, that this view of lend-lease was sound and just. A few days later, however, at a press conference, the President announced that these two sentences had been included by mistake and would not appear in the letter actually to be submitted to Congress.

What caused the President's change of mind we do not know. Perhaps he considered so frank a declaration about lend-lease settlement impolitic at the time. But by now the declaration has become imperative. Uncertainty on this issue is a corroding influence. It makes difficult the planning of a foreign trade program for Government officials as well as for businessmen. And what is even more important it plagues our relations with our Allies. The President was quite right in thinking that the treatment of lend-lease as a form of indebtedness would jeopardize the peace. And it is a sober fact that the United Nations cannot, without wrecking our own economy as well as theirs, repay us for the war materiel we shipped them in any other coin than victory and postwar security.

The term lend-lease, felicitous enough when it was invented by Mr. Roosevelt early in 1941, became a misnomer on the day the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor. From that day forward, we became not lenders or leasers, but full partners in a great coalition to destroy the Axis. The underlying principle of that coalition, the principle which made it effective, was best expressed by the President himself. "The United Nations," he said, "are growing stronger because each of them is contributing to the common struggle in full measure—whether in men, in weapons, or in materials. Each is contributing in accordance with its ability and its resources. Everything that all of us have is dedicated to victory over the Axis powers." There can be no talk of debits or credits in such a partnership.

To the extent that this truth is misunderstood by the American people, our hopes for security and enduring friendship with other nations will be diminished. Those who expect lend-lease to be repaid in money or in goods are going to be disappointed and disillusioned. The President had better acquaint them with the facts of life now. Lend-lease has been an immeasurably valuable investment in the defense of the United States. It has already paid us back in the same way that our Army and our Navy have paid us back for what we invested in them. And we shall profit a great deal more from tearing up the bill than from haggling over it.

Foreign Trade Plans

From London comes word that the British are organizing for an export trade drive after the war that is bound to bring them into conflict with American groups. Sir George Schuster, indeed, suggested at an American Chamber of Commerce luncheon that this country should consider curbing its exports in order to leave some leeway for other nations. Discussion of this sort is pretty good evidence that postwar foreign trade cannot be carried on with the freedom from restraints and controls that is the goal of the Department of Justice.

Nations in the position of Great Britain, heavily indebted to the rest of the world, "go after" trade not merely for the sake of securing income for exporting industries and providing jobs for the idle; they must expand their trade as a means of obtaining the funds with which to meet their obligations and buy abroad essential commodities. Thus, the expansion of foreign trade ceases to be the concern of private industry alone, and becomes a matter of governmental interest as well.

The delegates to the National Foreign Trade Convention held last week in New York assumed—and with reason—that our foreign traders will be handicapped in the conduct of export business if the Department of Justice is upheld in its interpretation of the antitrust laws as applied to foreign trade associations. "Uniform international rules governing trade can be helpful," the convention declared, "where common ground can be found for agreement among the important trading nations." It recommended that our laws be modified, so that Americans will not be at a disadvantage in conducting foreign business in competition with traders of countries where cartels are legalized. Since the Government itself has become a party to a cartel agreement for disposing of wheat surpluses, it can hardly maintain that international cartels serve no useful purpose. Nor does it seem logical to deprive private interests of the advantages of such organizations, provided they are subject to governmental supervision so as to prevent abuse of privilege.

Spanish Republic

The news of internal unrest in Spain augurs ill for General Franco's totalitarian regime in Spain. German and Italian arms which put him into power are no longer able to support him. The terrorism of his own Falangist forces is beginning to lose its effectiveness. And the underground movement, within the country and outside its borders in liberated France, is rising silently and inexorably to overthrow him. In New York the other day, the President-in-exile of the Spanish Basque Republic, Dr. Jose Antonio de Aguirre, made the flat prediction that "Revolution in Spain is due in the very next few months—events will reshape the face of the Iberian Peninsula."

There are abundant symptoms to support Dr. de Aguirre's forecast. Just lately a border clash occurred between Spanish maquis and Franco forces in Perpignan. The Generalissimo has become sufficiently alarmed about maquis activities in France to make a formal protest to the French government. We note that he has received from General de Gaulle no response which could allay his uneasiness. Inside Spain there is every reason to believe that a majority of the population is against him. Dr. de Aguirre, it seems to us, did not overstate the case in saying that "Today Franco and the Falangists are isolated internally as well as internationally."

Let them remain so. If we cannot assist the republican aspirations of the Spanish people, at least we should do nothing to thwart them. For they form a proper part of the great tide of libertarianism rising in all portions of the earth today. Suggestions that the victorious United Nations impose a restored monarchy upon Spain are no less an affront to our declared principles than to the independence of Spaniards. The people of Spain have earned the right to choose their own form of government. It is of peculiar interest to us that it be a free form. For Spain is the link between Europe and the Spanish-spaking peoples who are our neighbors in this hemisphere.

Moscow Mood

Until Premier Churchill has made his report to Parliament, which it is believed he will do tomorrow, the only reliable information we have regarding the discussions at Moscow is the information given out in the Anglo-Russian communique. It was there stated that among the subjects discussed were the Polish problem, the question of Yugoslavia, the terms of the Bulgarian armistice, and the military conduct of the war. What agreements, if any, were made have not yet been disclosed, although it is evident that in the case of Bulgaria, at least, the Stalin-Churchill talks tended to bring about an understanding among the principal Allies. The same, no doubt, holds true of the military discussions, and there is reason to believe that previous Anglo-Russian differences over Yugoslavia have now largely been ironed out.

It does not appear that this can be said for the Polish issue. Latest reports from London indicate that the hope of bringing together the rival Polish regimes in London and Lublin and solving the problem of Poland's postwar boundaries is still as far off as ever. Whether this is so or not, Churchill's speech may show. But whatever differences remain between the two leaders, it is evident from the remarkable cordiality displayed by both parties during the course of the Moscow meeting, that a larger measure of harmony now obtains between Great Britain and Russia than ever obtained before in this war. In this circumstance there is much hope.

SEA WRACK

These are the spiny amber flowers of harsh kelp
On which a frost of salt already whitens in noon sun;
The battered box, the rusted tin and splintered oar;
The tidemarks of the course a storm has run.

This is the bleached pink empty armor of the crab
And this, the weathered silver driftwood of strange tree,
Drying on pebbled shingle in an ebbing aftermath,
In a silence that is louder than the crash of sea.

This is the morning after three-day siege of storm:
Wind fallen and glass favorable to sailor's eye;
This is the hour saved from furious wreck of time,
Impermanent as spindrift, but beautiful as clearing sky.

Skirt Cycles

OUTRANKING MOTOR CARS or radios as a reconversion problem are women's skirts. Now that the revocation of WPB order, L-85, which has kept women in skimpy apparel for two and a half years, is expected soon, the garment manufacturers, the retailers, and most assuredly women themselves, are becoming as tense over future events as stock market speculators.

Skirt widths during 1945-46 may materially affect the national economy. They may influence the fortunes of the huge coat and suit industry and of the retail merchandising business. They may help or hinder employment. They undoubtedly will affect the pocketbook of every American household.

Why single out the skirt? Because it has largely been the basis and symbol of style change for two centuries. Because in its recent skin-tight pull-up-over-the knees effect it has been the typification of L-85's fabric conserving provisions.

Women need not fear—or even hope—that their scanty skirts will vanish overnight when L-85 goes out. Fabric shortage is acute now, is expected to be very tight for at least another year—unless there are startling changes in the war picture.

Long Distance Planning

Moreover, clothes designers and manufacturers work about six months ahead. The spring silhouette is established; spring showings are now being held for retailers. Next fall's clothes must be ready to show by June. Their character will depend on the fabric situation, women's needs and, if the war is nearing a close, the cycle of style change.

Long term question facing manufacturers, retailers, consumers is: will there be style revolution or evolution once fabrics are plentiful?

Revolution might mean commercial havoc, with a rush of buying to replace out of date clothes, and the encouragement of inflation. It would mean financial loss to merchants caught with the wrong stocks, to women caught with expensive "duration" garments. Some uneasiness in this line has been caused by the voluminous skirts and balloon sleeves recently shown in Paris. But the tight fabric market here would prevent such trends in this country for many months to come.

Evolution in clothes styles would mean a gradual change into a new cycle that fashion authorities say is long overdue.

Fashion, like business activity, has its cycles, and its changes follow definite unwritten — possibly cosmic — laws. Agnes Brooks Young, who has made a comprehensive study of these cycles, found that during the last two centuries, three fundamental types of fashion silhouette—based on skirt styles—rotated, each cycle covering approximately one-third of a century.

Men Follow Suit

These were — in terms of skirts—the back-fullness cycle, the tubular cycle, and the bell-shaped cycle. Men's styles in their variation of detail, also followed these cycles. According to this researcher, the cycle styles, in their general aspects, were unaffected by material events, such as wars, depressions, industrial development. Only in the shorter variations within the long cycles was contemporary living reflected.

From 1900 to 1937, the date when Mrs. Young's research ended, the tubular contour prevailed. Shortly before World War II, skirts had begun to widen, and there was indication a new bell-shaped cycle might be beginning. But along came Pearl Harbor and L-85, and skirts suddenly contracted. Exponents of the three-cycle-a-century theory would say the tight, L-85 skirts, made under war necessity, were only a style variant, and that the bell-shaped cycle, which a century ago initiated "Gone With the Wind" fashions, would now get under way.

Whether or not that theory is accepted, most fashion authorities believe the time is near for winding up the present short cycle of narrow skirts. Generally speaking, they do not expect a violent revolution either in the interest of business or to relieve sartorial boredom. Due to human conservatism, styles in the past have seldom been successful when they departed too abruptly from the mode. Also, women have steadily grown more independent. They are not likely to throw their present wardrobes in the ash can, no matter what Paris or fashion revolutionaries may decree.

No Vote

Both candidates are telling every one to register and vote, but with the laws as they are in Virginia it is almost impossible. There are quite a few people like myself who have moved and in doing so have had papers misplaced. As they won't let anyone register without showing three tax receipts, there will be a lot of people who won't be able to vote. A VIRGINIAN.

Churchill In Moscow

By Sumner Welles

Conference Well Timed For Effect

THE VISIT OF Mr. Churchill to Moscow cannot help but be productive of great benefits. It may be that he will not succeed in all of his immediate objectives. But from the longer view the discussions in which he has engaged took place at a useful moment. They will result in clarifications which must assist greatly in shaping the development of the initial plans for international organization, and in crystallizing the policies of the major powers with regard to future settlements in eastern and central Europe.

The question of timing in foreign policy is far more important than is generally realized. That is one element in which the Soviet government is singularly expert. It maintains its foreign policy as fluid as its battle lines. It has thus retained the initiative for a long time past. Fortunately, both the President and Mr. Churchill appreciate the significance of this factor. When they individually handle negotiations, their sense of the value of timing is preeminent.

The conversations between Marshal Stalin and the British Prime Minister took place at the precise moment when they could best rally a public opinion in the democracies which was rapidly becoming uneasy because of what seemed to be a serious conflict of interests in eastern Europe between the Soviet Union and Great Britain. Fears were mounting that if no speedy solution was found for the problems in that region, the prospects for the establishment of such a world organization as that projected at Dumbarton Oaks were indeed remote. This feeling of pessimism existed primarily because there were no known plans and no visible mechanism for putting a stop to the innumerable evidences of discord which have recently arisen in the Balkans and in eastern Europe.

AN OUTSTANDING instance of such cases of divergent policies was the declaration of war upon Bulgaria by the Soviet Union at the moment when the British and United States Governments were attempting to negotiate an armistice. The obvious differences of viewpoint in handling the military and political problems which arose in Yugoslavia constituted another. The gravest example of them all has, of course, been the protracted and tragic controversy between the Polish government-in-exile and the Soviet government.

At the same time the flames of anarchy have been fast spreading throughout the lands from which the German armies have been forced to withdraw. The entrance of the British and Greek forces of liberation into Greece has coincided with fratricidal struggles between various groups of Greek patriots. The contest between the troops of Marshal Tito and Serbian units has by no means ceased. The civil war which began in Hungary when Admiral Horthy sought armistice terms is destined to continue in one form or another for a long time to come.

Post facto criticism is always easy. But I think it is undeniable that the only way in which the major powers could have mitigated a new form of devastation which will exhaust still further peoples who have for long years been suffering under the German yoke, would have been the establishment early in the war of a political council, composed of their responsible delegates and of representatives of the smaller powers at which common preventive plans to meet each one of the situations which have now arisen could have been formulated.

IT WOULD, in this manner, have been far easier to canalize the revolutionary spirit which is sweeping Europe into constructive, rather than purely destructive, channels. It would thus have been far simpler to avoid any clash of policies between the great powers.

One of the most salutary aspects of these new Moscow conferences is the fact that the chief responsibility for finding equitable solutions for European problems is being patently assumed by European governments. To those who, like myself, believe that the surest foundation for a workable international organization will be found to consist of regional systems, each primarily responsible for the adjustment of problems originating within its respective area, and operating under the supreme authority of an international council representing all regions, this evidence that the initial task of solving the bitter controversies of eastern and southeastern Europe has been undertaken by European powers is heartening.

That is far from being an indication that I believe that the United States can, or should, sit indefinitely upon the sidelines and tacitly acquiesce in whatever decisions may now be reached. The supreme interest of the United States is to make sure that the settlements which will come about as a result of the victory which this nation will have done so much to win, will make for a durable peace. Unless the decisions laid down are both practical and just there will be scant chance of a lasting peace.

IN THE CASE of the Polish controversy the policy of this government—as for that matter the policies of the British and Russian governments—has been clearly and officially stated. All three governments are committed to the reconstitution of Poland as a great nation. There will most certainly be no chance of a peaceful Europe in our lifetime unless that objective is achieved after the war, not only in letter, but in spirit as well. Articles recently sent from Moscow by American correspondents which urge the Polish people to reconcile themselves to what these correspondents allege to be a "basic reality," namely, that the Poland of the future is destined to be a small nation like Denmark, are wholly counter to what public opinion in this country justly construes the policy of this government to be.

If the conversations in which Mr. Churchill and Marshal Stalin have taken part advance the settlement of the Polish controversy towards an ultimate solution which will secure for the people of Poland that to which they are fairly entitled, real greatness, and real independence, they will have removed one of the biggest obstacles to healthy co-operation after the war between the United Nations.

They will also provide at least a partial pattern not only for the solution of other acute European problems, but likewise for the most effective method of handling regional questions when the international organization is at length created.

Pro Roosevelt

I am not sure in my heart that Thomas Dewey is for me. Who am I? Just a little guy with no angles, political or economic. My being in uniform does not matter in this discussion. My being a citizen does matter. I have a very clear remembrance of 1928 and 1929 and 1930. And all this gives me no peace when I contemplate Thomas Dewey.

I'll grant you that President Roosevelt makes mistakes, but he has convinced me that he is for me. I don't mean that I believe that he will pass me favors out of proportion to my status in the economic system.

I do mean that I have come to believe that he won't let me have my little share of America submitted to the kind of well-organized shaving with which I believe Thomas Dewey to be associated.

And I don't mean that a Dewey administration will discourage me in my desire to go into business for myself after demobilization. I feel that a Dewey administration will "let" me. They won't help me, nor will they hinder me. But, through the control of credit, and the further centralization of business, they will make it harder and harder for me to get over the riffle. In other words, I would not feel free to go ahead, with the top man on the wedding cake in the White House.

T/3 R. F. ALLEN

Washington, Oct. 15.

There is no essential difference between the same President serving four terms and the same political party in office for an equal duration, especially when most Republican Presidents are machine stamped. They go under different names, but they are so impersonal and leaderless that they might as well be simply numbered GOP 1, 2, 3, 4, etc. Essentially they are the same type of figurehead serving four terms. Between 1860-1884 the Republican Party served six consecutive terms. Between 1920-1932 it served three. Between 1800-1840 the Democratic Party served ten consecutive terms.

The same President serving four terms is preferable to the same strict party doing so, for he is more vulnerable and the easier thrown out if delinquent than the same old party whom we in our slavishness regard as another "sacred American institution." G. L. REES.

Coward's Comments

I believe that, for future reference, your readers will be interested in some comments by that popular English actor-writer, Mr. Noel Coward. I give them to you as quoted in an English review of his new book, "Middle East Diary":

"Mr. Coward appreciates the importance of good Anglo-American relations, but they will scarcely be helped by his description of some visiting American Senators ('an uninspiring group of men . . . oh! my God, they were dull . . . aggressively homespun figures.') Nor will American mothers, a highly influential section of America, take very kindly to a reference to 'mournful little Brooklyn boys lying there in tears amidst the alien corn with nothing worse than a bullet wound in the leg or a fractured arm,' lard this as he may with praise of 'tough men from Texas and Arizona.'"—The New Statesman and Nation, page 189, September 16, 1944.

No doubt, as the reviewer says, Mr. Coward, in his entertainment tour of Africa and the Middle East, "risked his reputation as a performer at almost every appearance." It is worth noting, however, that each of these "mournful little Brooklyn boys" risked something far dearer and more important than "reputation as a performer." JOHN L. SWEENEY.

Personal Politics

By Mark Sullivan

Crossing Party Lines

PAUSE, READER, and find surcease. In days charged with excitement, fed by politicians, press and radio, and felt by much of the public, there remain some whose poise of mind and temperament preserve for them a happy immunity. For such there is, in the latest political sensation, less excitement than entertainment.

A Republican Senator, Joseph H. Ball of Minnesota, announces that he will vote for President Roosevelt, though he remains a Republican, disagreeing with the President on domestic issues, and supporting him solely because of the foreign relations issue. At once there arise floods of recrimination from Republicans, jubilation from Democrats, political tempest. But read the incident in the light of political facts, and also of political history, recent and vivid.

As bearing on the presidential election, the practical question is, how many votes will be switched from Governor Dewey to Mr. Roosevelt by Senator Ball's action? The answer is, probably not many. Few men in public office have personal followings distinguishable from the support they have as representatives of their party, Mr. Ball, when he ran for the Senate two years ago, got 356,297 votes. If this was a typical election in a typical State, probably all but a negligible handful of those votes went to Mr. Ball because he was the Republican candidate, but would have gone to any other Republican candidate equally acceptable.

IT IS A RARE man in national politics who has a personal forlowing so loyal that he can acrry it from one party to the other; and so large that the transition can make a difference in a national election. Defection of a leader from one side to the other rarely influences national elections. It has been tried by leaders of higher rank than Mr. Ball. Recall so recent an example as the late Alfred E. Smith of New York. He had been four times Governor of his State, and candidate of his party for the Presidency. He was extremely popular, was supposed to have a large and devoted personal following, but when he "took a walk" from Mr. Roosevelt the result was not measurable in the election.

True, we must ask the broader question. To what extent is Mr. Ball's action significant because of what it symbolizes? Some important sources of independent opinion take the same view. But as bearing on the election, the question is, how many Republican or independent voters are there who take the same position as Mr. Ball? How many voters oppose Mr. Roosevelt on issues other than the foreign relations one, but will vote for him because of that issue alone? Probably here too the answer is the same, not many.

ON THIS POINT there is light in recent history. Fundamentally there is a strong analogy between this election and the 1940 one. The similarity is singular and ironic.

In 1940 both candidates, Mr. Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie, did not favor our intervening in the war. An immense majority of the American people, at that time, felt the same. To the electorate, the position of both candidates on this point was satisfactory. Hence the electorate divided on other issues. There was little quibbling as to whether Mr. Roosevelt would avoid involvement in the war by a better way than Mr. Willkie, or vice versa. The electorate in 1940 divided on domestic issues, which were much the same as the domestic issues in the present campaign.

Observe the similarity today. In this campaign, both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Dewey favor an international organization to prevent future wars. An immense majority of the electorate feels the same, and regards the positions of both candidates as satisfactory. In the minds of average voters, there is little argument as to whether Mr. Roosevelt's way of bringing about the international organization is better than Mr. Dewey's, or vice versa. Earnest intellectuals and experts debate fine points with admirable thoroughness. But to the average voter the distinctions are esoteric and immaterial. He will vote on other issues, and in 99 cases out of a hundred has already made up his mind.

Let Teacher Do It

According to The Post of October 19 pea shooting has become a pest in San Francisco. San Francisco school teachers are being asked to control this situation by appeals to patriotism of the students. This is idiotic!

Forbid the sale of pea-shooters. It is as simple as that! Parents should have to see that Junior does not buy the shooter or use one. If he refuses to obey give him what Paddy gave the drum; a dose of moral suasion where it used to do so much good.

School teachers have no power. Parents come and say "I can't do a thing with Junior". But teacher with forty or more Juniors is supposed to do many things. No word of reprimand under any circumstances for fear of hurting Junior's feelings. Teacher is supposed to let him pop her in the eye and keep on smiling. If she protests parents trot down to school headquarters and hold secret conferences about the teacher to which the teacher is not a party.

Registration Figures

By Ernest Lindley

Developments Favor Roosevelt

AS THE REGISTRATION figures from the cities are compiled, it begins to look as if the total civilian vote in the 1944 election would be somewhat larger than had been estimated earlier. Gallup has suddenly and drastically revised his guess as to the total civilian vote from 39 million to 45.

It appears also that the total vote of members of the armed forces will exceed earlier predictions. The obstacles left, first by Congress and then in a number of States, have been overcome in part by the conscientious and thorough job done by the armed services in distributing applications for ballots to soldiers and sailors of voting age and explaining to them their rights. According to current guesses, the armed services may cast more than 2,500,000 ballots and possibly as many as 3,000,000.

LINDLEY

These twin developments are almost certainly favorable to the President's prospects of reelection. Few politicans or observers would concede him a chance of reelection if the total civilian vote were only 39 million. Most would concede that if the total vote, civilian and military, goes above 45 million, he would have a chance. And if the total goes beyond 47 million, as many now guess it may do, his prospects should improve. (In 1940, when nearly 50 million votes were cast, Roosevelt's plurality approximated 5 million.)

ACCORDING TO GALLUP, about 51 per cent of the civilian voters favor Roosevelt. Ordinarily that would not be enough to elect a Democratic candidate for President, since, when the lopsided Southern States have been subtracted, his average vote in the rest of the country is likely to fall below 50 per cent. It is widely believed, however, that Roosevelt will receive a higher percentage of the vote of the armed services than of the civilian vote. In the past his percentage has run higher in the younger age groups than in the older. This is without counting any extra prestige that may accrue to him in the armed services through his position as President and Commander in Chief.

If Roosevelt were to receive 51 per cent of a civilian vote of 45 million and two-thirds of a service vote of three million, his percentage of the total vote, civilian and military combined, would be about 52 per cent. At that level he should have a chance to win.

No estimate that this column has seen has placed Roosevelt's share of the civilian vote at less than 51 per cent.

In 1940 Gallup's figures during the latter part of the campaign erred substantially in favor of the Republicans. They indicated a very close election, whereas Roosevelt won comfortably. Many seasoned political observers came closer than Gallup to predicting the result. Presumably Gallup has taken measures to correct his 1940 error. But neither he nor any of the other samplers can be sure that they are using a cross-section which will accurately indicate the vote in 1944.

IN SOME of the important cities in the key aSttes, however, registration has topped 1940, and in others the civilian and expected service vote combined top 1940. In many cities fresh registration is required for each election and the vote cast is therefore a very large percentage of the registration—in New York City usually more than 97 per cent. In rural areas and smaller cities, permanent registration is more often the rule, the names of those who have moved away or have died are not always promptly stricken from the rolls, and the percentage of the registered vote which is cast is therefore usually smaller than in the areas requiring fresh registration.

The city registration figures are not high enough to make many, if any, of the Eastern and East Central States look safe for Roosevelt. But they are high enough to encourage the Democrats and to revive their hopes of carrying some of the States earlier regarded as probably Dewey's. These include Illinois, Ohio, and New Jersey, in addition to New York and Pennsylvania, which have long been marked as key States in this election, and to Massachusetts and Connecticut. Nor have the Democrats given up hope of carrying Michigan, which went to Willkie by 7,000 votes, and Indiana, as well as Minnesota.

Turner Catledge, level-headed and able political reporter for the New York Times, thinks that Illinois is now in the doubtful column. Similar reports are coming from other States where Dewey, a few weeks ago, was thought to have a decided edge. Roosevelt might lose all of these States. But the critical area of doubt has been enlarged. The Democrats now consider their prospects good enough in most of the States east of the prairie tier—as well as on the West Coast and in most of the mountain States—to justify real effort during the closing fortnight of the campaign.

Peace Needs Roosevelt, Says Truman

Madison, Wis., Oct. 24 (AP).—Senator Harry S. Truman, Democratic candidate for vice-president, declared today that "all liberal-minded peoples must get behind the president" in a project to write a peace program to prevent future war.

"We must not let our grandsons do what our sons are now having to do," Truman said in an address before a Madison campaign luncheon meeting.

"I think some good can come out of this war is we are willing to assume the obligations God intended for us to take in this situation. I believe God Almighy intended that this nation take its rightful place among he naions of he world."

The Senator discussed the activities of his Senate committee which investigated the defense program, saying that on an initial appropriation of $15,000 it brought about corrections which he said military authorities reported had saved the taxpayers 150 million dollars. President Roosevelt was in full accord with its activities, he remarked.

Holds Rounds of Conferences

The luncheon concluded a round of conferences for the Senator, who arrived by train from Minneapolis at 7:30 a. m. He held a press conference, toured Truax Field, and conferred with leaders of the Wisconsin Farmers' Union and with AFL and CIO labor leaders before he left for Milwaukee, where he speaks tonight.

Earlier in the day, Senator Truma nexpressed the opinion that the activity of the Political Action Committee in behalf of the Democratic ticket was having no adverse effect amon gthe farmers.

"The farmers are waking up to the fact the best friend they ever had is now in the White House," Senator Truman saidat a press conference.

Asked if he had found isolationist sentiment in the Middle-West, Truman answered, "No—because they know how I feel on that."

"Isolationist" Label Rejected

Denver, Oct. 24 (AP).—Senator Millikin (R.,Colo.) says he does not want to "trade epithets with Senator Truman, for that would be like wrestling with a cipher," but adds that he objects to the "isolationist" label the Democratic vice-presidential nominee has pinned on him and seven other Republicans seeking reelection.

Senator Truman (D., Mo.) called the eight "isolationists" in a speech yesterday in Minneapolis.

Millikin told an interviewer last night thta "Senator Truman should know from the records of the Senate that I voted for the Connally resolution which commits this country to a policy of cooperation for the preservation of world peace."

He added that "I do not favor allowing any international organization to commit this country to war without the consent of Congress, an dtherefore he should also know that I am not an internationalist any more than I am an isolationist."

Bricker Adds 7 New Talks For Midwest

Aboard Bricker Campaign Train Enroute Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 24 (U.P.).—Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio tonight decided to carry a stronger bid for Republican support into Missouri, home state of his Democratic vice presidential opponent, Senator Harry S. Truman, by making six additional rear platform speeches next Saturday.

The GOP vice presidential nominee announced he would speak at Harrisonville, Rich Hill, Nevada, Lamar, Neosho and Aurora. Originally he had planned only to deliver what his staff tonight termed "one of the major addresses of the Republican national campaign," at Kansas City Friday night, and to speak at Joplin and Springfield on Saturday. Tomorrow, Bricker speaks at Fort Worth, Tex., at noon, and Dallas at night.

Besides the six additional rear platform speeches in Missouri, Bricker also has added a talk at Newton to his Kansas itinerary. He also will speak at Wichita and at Emporia.

"Neglected Man"

The six Missouri and one additional Kansas apeparances brings to 114 the speeches Bricker will make on his 9250-mile western campaign trip. Bricker spent his time tonight "sharpening" his Kansas City speech which will be broadcast nationally. There was no indication what his theme would be, but his staff spokesmen predicted it would be "major in every respect."

Today at Pueblo, Colo., Bricker introduced into the campaign "the neglected man" as a counterpart of the New Deal's famous "forgotten man." The neglected man, he said, was the white collar worker—clerks, stenographers, small manufacturers, small merchants and professional men.

"What's happened to him," Bricker said, "is one of the most tragic developments of our times."

"He has been outraged by Government extravagances, dictation, and the double talk of the New Deal.

White Collar "Squeeze"

"Moreover, between the War Labor Board, War Manpower Commission, and the Office of Production Management, he has been squeezed between the irresistible forces of arbitrary price control, wage control and labor control."

He told a Pueblo news conference that if Gov. Thomas E. Dewey is elected next month, the Republicans would voluntarily relinquish many of the presidential powers they would inherit from Mr. Roosevelt.

Bricker, who protested from coast to coast against what he says are the "excessive powers, even in wartime," of the President, said, "there would have to be a gradual dismantling of the President's power's structure. The President now has entirely too much power and we'd give up much of it right away."

Danaher Cites Points That President Left Out of Speech

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 24 (AP).—United States Senator John A. Danaher (R., Conn.) seeking reelection, said today in a campaign broadcast that President Roosevelt omitted things from his foreign policy address Saturday night which were "even more important" than what he did say.

"H completely failed to tell you," Danaher said in his prepared talk, "that the Neutrality Act was put on the statute books when he overwhelmingly controlled the Congress, and he demanded the legislation himself."

The Senator said the President blamed Republicans because "much of the strength of our Navy was scuttled," and did not say that "every single Democrat in the United States Senate voted in favor" of the agreements reached at the 1922 disarmament conference.

Danaher said also that the President "didn't tell you" that in a letter appointing Norman Davis the United States representative at a 1935 naval conference he asked him to propose to England and Japan "a substantial proportional reduction in the present naval levels." Quoting further from the letter Danaher said the President told Davis that the United States, England and Japan "have nothing to fear from one another."

'Dollars-for-Dewey'

New York, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—Anthony Capasso, a CIO local official, has advised Republican National Chairman Herbert Brownell, jr., of the formation of a "Dollar-for-Dewey" campaign as a protest against activities of the CIO Political Action Committee, the Republican National Committee announced today.

Capasso, chief steward for the Brass Workers Union (CIO) Local 320 of Bridgeport, Conn., told Brownell he had been suspended by his union after refusing to contribute to the PAC campaign for the reelection of President Roosevelt, the Republican committee said. More than 400 other members of his union, Capasso told Brownell, are ready to contribute to the "Dollar-for-Dewey" campaign.

The Republican committee also announced celebratioon by women voters tomorrow of "Double the Vote for Dewey Day" campaign for the support of independent voters.

Navy to Train Guns on Idaho's Surplus Deer, Elk

By the Associated Press

The Navy stands ready to level its guns in defense of the embattled farmers of Hope, Idaho.

Teh targets—if the order comes to fire—will be deer and elk which, growers contend, browse nightly in their gardens and eat away orchards.

Aid from the Farragut, Idaho, naval training base to eliminate surplus animals was requested some time ago by Representative White (D-Idaho). Today White's office was informed by Commander F. M. Kelley of the Farragut base that Navy trainees are ready for action.

"We will stand by with the necessary equipment awaiting your reply," Kelley wrote.

Living Ladder Remoces Couple from Robot Deb

London, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—A living ladder of rescuers was used early today to remove a middle-aged couple buried beneath the debris of their home in a southeastern village in one of two sharp flying bomb attacks.

The couple, living in an apartment above a garage, was buried beneath the wreckage. Firemen beat a path through flames and kept open a lane in which rescuers passed from hand to hand the man and his wife. The woman died.

PAC Accomplishments In Detroit

Detroit, Mich.—IS THE CIO Political Action Committee an asset or a liability to Candidate Roosevelt in the fourth term campaign?

There can be no final answer to that question until the votes are counted. But on the basis of the job that PAC has done in registering industrial workers who have moved to war production areas such as this one, PAC is likely to prove a decided asset.

CHILDS

It provides, of course, a propaganda handle with which to belabor FDR and the New Deal. Described as a "left wing Liberty League," it does have some of the political connotations of that unfortunate venture in that it represents the solidification of a class interest within one of the major parties.

But the Liberty League has comparatively few members, while CIO's PAC has a mass allegiance. If PAC's followers vote on November 7 in 35 key industrial cities in 12 States, then the originators of the committee will be able to take considerable credit for the reelection of Roosevelt.

Here in Detroit, unbiased observers give PAC credit for the record registration rolled up in recent weeks. Early in the fall it looked as though the registration job would not be done here. The PAC office in New York was discouraged about this area, to which so many new workers had migrated.

Money was scarce. PAC in Detroit was unable to open the big headquarters that had been hoped for. About a month ago, however, things began to happen.

THE CITY COUNCIL liberalized registration provisions, so that it was possible to open 59 or more registration booths. No voter had to go more than half a mile to sign up. Certain of the motor plants permitted registration of workers between shifts. The PAC put on 150 paid workers.

Behind all this activity was the master file in the regional PAC office. In that master file were more than a half million names, provided for the most part by the United Auto Workers. Opposite each name was the home address of the individual and the name of his shop steward.

This made it possible to have two checks on whether or not the individual had registered. If he was not visited at his home and persuaded to get his name down on the polling books, then his shop steward reminded him of his duty.

There were lotteries in which new registrants drew chances on thousand dollar United States War Bonds provided by PAC. Long lines formed before registration booths, with women workers, incidentally, outnumbering the men.

VERY much the same thing has happened in other communities with huge new war produetion in the middle West. Chicago and Cook County have a record registration. On last report it stood at 2,420,853, as compared with 2,282,000 in '40. And this does not include an estimated 50,000 servicemen from Cook County who have reached the age of 21, but do not need to register in order to vote. The soldier vote from the Chicago area is put at from 120,000 to 160,000.

Industrial areas downstate also have a heavy registration. In Rock Island and Moline, where there is a concentration of war industry, thousands of new registrants have qualified.

The results in Indiana are particularly striking. The State has the largest registration in its history. And recently Fred Bays, Democratic State Chairman for Indiana, wrote to Raymond S. McKeough, regional PAC director in Chicago, saying that "too much credit cannot be given your organization."

In Marion County, with Indianapolis, the total registration is 325,000, 15,000 more than ever before. In St. Joseph County, which includes South Bend, it is 125,000, 20,000 above the old record. In Lake County, with the big industrial centers of Gary, East Chicago and Hammond, the total is close to 180,000, 30,000 more than before.

On the West Coast, something like the same kind of job has been done. Reports from the east show big registrations there. From all indications, PAC has done the first part of the job. One more test is still to come.

Japs to Pick Up Relief Supplies For Prisoners

The definite word that a Japanese ship will pick up 1500 tons of accumulated relief supplies for Allied prisoners was announced yesterday by the State Department.

Through the Swiss government, Tokyo has informed the United States that the 4000-ton combined cargo and passenger vessel Hakusan Maru will leave Japan October 28 for Nakhodka, 60 miles east of Vladivostok, under American safe conduct guarantee.

The Japenese decision came after protracted negotiations lasting since the early days of the war.

These supplies which accumulated at Vladivostok, have been moved to Nakhodka, said Acting Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, jr., who added that efforts also will be made to put aboard the ship mail for prisoners and internees.

Third Party, Same As in 1940, To Poll Less Than One Per Cent

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 24—The number of the nation's civilian voters who will mark their ballots for third-party candidates this November will amount to less than one per cent of all votes cast.

This estimate does not, it should be emphasized, include the soldier vote, since polling of members of the armed forces by civilians is not permitted. There is thus no way of telling how the soldier vote will be distributed among any of the candidates.

The chief third party candidate, Norman Thomas, will, on the basis of present data, poll a larger vote than he did in 1940 when he received just short of 100,000 votes.

An analysis of the findings indicates that roughly two-thirds of the people who voted for a third-party candidate in 1940 will cast their canddiate in 1940 party candidate this year.

The remainder are recruits in about equal proportions from 1940 Willkie and Roosevelt voters and those who did not vote in the last presidential election. Consequently, neither of the major-party candidates will be helped or hurt by the so-called "protest" vote.

Only two times during the present century have third parties won an appreciable percentage of the total vote cast in presidential elections.

In 1912, third parties won 34.9 per cent of the vote. This is largely accounted for by the "Bull Moose" candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt.

In 1924, much of the third-party 17.1 per cent vote is accounted for by votes cast for "Bob" LaFollette, Sr., who ran on the Progressive ticket. No third party candidate since that time has succeeded in carrying a single state.

Following is a table showing the proportion of the vote cast for all third parties in presidential elections since 1900:

	% Third Parties	Winning Candidate
1900	2.8%	McKinley
1904	6.0	T. Roosevelt
1908	5.3	Taft
1912	34.9	Wilson
1916	4.7	Wilson
1920	5.5	Harding
1924	17.1	Coolidge
1928	1.1	Hoover
1932	2.9	F. Roosevelt
1936	2.6	F. Roosevelt
1940	.5	F. Roosevelt

Nazi Distrust Delays Arming Of Last-Ditch Civilian Force

Even in the final struggle Germany's Nazi leaders won't trust the country's millions of civilians with guns, but are withholding firearms from the new 16-to-60 "citizen soldiers" until they are placed under complete military control, informed Washington sources reported yesterday.

Germans forming this "bottom of the barrel" defense force, under instructions to fight from house to house, get their rifles and machine guns only after they have been uniformed and put under the 24-hour scrutiny of regular army officers.

Obviosly, it was said, this departure from the historic role of militia is necesary to protect the lives of the thousands of Gestapo agents pledged to keep Germany in the wart to the bitter end.

England, faced with a similar last-ditch battle in 1940, put her full faith in her home guards. They were issued rifles and machine guns and alowed to take them home. After 10-and 12-hour workdays in offices and factories, they trained for resistance to the invasion that never came.

Handling the wheel and pedals like a professional became a wartime necessity. It favored the car—and quit scaring the rear-seat riders. Now it's a great point of pride. Yet an even more envied proof of fine car-sense is to own an engine that isn't showing its age. That demands sparing your engine from acids; from fiercely corrosive acids inside. You can do it by having your engine OIL-PLATED. All you need is a change to Conoco Nth motor oil...oil that OIL-PLATES.

In the extra-limited seasonal driving that's now the rule, your engine "hoards" a surplus of acids. Every explosion adds to these acids. You don't drive enough for engine heat to eject them safely. But they won't go biting right through OIL-PLATING! This highly corrosion-resistant surfacing is attached all over your engine's fine inner finish as if by magnetism—an effect you must credit to costly pioneer research, responsible for the special ingredient in popular-priced Conoco Nth oil, patented.

"The Late Mr. Apley," accorded its premiere on the stage of the National Theater last night, is, first and foremost, an interesting and highly amusing conversation piece.

Dramatized from John P. Marquand's Pulitzer Prize novel by Mr. Marquand and George S. Kaufman, it is, furthermore, something in the nature of a two-edged dramatic sword that cuts sharply in two directions.

On the one hand, it may be construed as a richly humorous satire on the "new England tradition"—specifically Boston's—that finds expression in the oft-quoted observation that the Lodges speak only to Cabots and the Cabots speak only to God. On the other, it may be interpreted with equal support and justification as a defense of a rigid adherence to the questionable virtues of class-consciousness, pride of family and the ingrained convictions of an hereditary awareness of contrasts in the social scale—for better or for worse.

If this seems to imply that the play can be all things to all men, immediate emphasis should be placed upon the fact that to all men of discrimination, good taste and admiration of literate writing and suave and gracious acting "The Late Mr. Apley" also can be but one thing—a delightfully cogent entertainment of high good humor, occasional tenseness and a suave and gentle charm that made last evening's uncounted curtain calls inevitable.

Smilingly "Significant"

The Messrs. Marquand and Kaufman may or may not have had something of "social significance" in mind when they dramatized the Marquand novel. I prefer to believe that their principal object was to supply this season's already slightly jaded audiences with a bit of a fillip on the side of adult comedy of the more substantial sort.

If the play is a salute to snobbery, it also is a friendly gesture on the side of the preservation of family blood lines, integrity and the thought that an occasional personal sacrifice is a salutary thing.

That is a premise with which I have never been able to pick a very serious quarrel.

The scene of the action—what little there is—is, for the most part, the living room in George Apley's house in Beacon st., Boston. Mr. Apley and his wife are discovered as two victims of a deadly routine of trivial interests that consume all of their time and none of their more worthy capabilities as folk of gentle breeding, a fanatical devotion to the fetish of Boston's cultural supremacy and an idolatrous respect for Emerson, Thoreau and Harvard.

Convention on a Holiday

It is Thanksgiving Day as the play opens and the family dinner in the Apley home probably is one of the dreariest occasions ever held up to polite and hilarious ridicule behind the footlights.

It is made painfully clear that all the aunts, uncles and cousins are slowly and inexorably being made the condemned of the Apley preoccupation with the inconsequential, passion for individual inhibitions and inflexible loyalty to past generations.

Out of this preliminary situation, the authors have evolved a tale of youthful rebellion, a partial revision of the senior Apley point of view and a redundant epilogue that seemed to this observer only an anticlimactic repetition of what had been sufficiently indicated at the fall of the third-act curtain.

The piece has been costumed and set by Stewart Chaney with a deftness that elicited applause at the rise of the first curtain and is acted with a skill that earned practically every principal member of the cast the tribute of spontaneous outbursts of approval as the three acts progressed.

In the title role, Leo G. Carroll contributes a performance that one is tempted to describe as perfection itself. Always restrained, always a figure of believability and respect, Mr. Carroll imbues George Apley with dignity, power, weakness and occasional poignance. It is as engaging a portrayal that he brings to the pivotal character in all that transpires as any season is apt to produce.

He is handsomely supported by Janet Beecher, as Mrs. Apley; Percy Waram, as Cousin Roger Newcombe; Reynolds Evans, as Cousin Horatio Willing; Catherine Proctor, as the mouselike Jane Willing, and Margaret Dale, in the most acidulously amusing role in the play—that of the assertive Amelia Newcombe, the bitterly outspoken member of the clan.

Juvenile interests are effectively cared for by Joan Chandler, David McKay, Margaret Phillips and John Conway. The lesser roles are played with a uniform competence that holds the standard of excellence high.

One suspects that Producer Max Gordon has another hit on his hands.

Four Injured When Truck Leaves Road

Three Washington women were seriously injured and a Maryland motorist suffered a brain concussion last night when a seven-ton trailer truck ran off the Baltimore pike in University Park, Md., and struck the women and a small sedan, according to Prince George's County police.

The injured women, who were standing at the corner of Underwood rd. and Baltimore pk., were identified at Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, as Mrs. Anne Mills, 48, fractured ankle and knee; Mrs. Alma Gibson, 46, both legs broken, and her daughter, Miss Ella Gibson, 20, all of 5213 Kansas ave. nw., a broken leg and broken wrist.

Mrs. Gibson was reported to be in serious condition last night. She had received two blood transfusions.

Also at Leland Memorial Hospital was Charles Edward Prince, 44, of College Park, Md., who could not remember anything that happened in the past two days, according to Dr. L. W. Malin of the hospital staff. Dr. Malin said Prince had a serious concussion and had no memory of the accident, although police reported he had been driving his own car when it was struck by the trailer truck.

The truck driver, Alvin Jackson Fisk, 28, of Roanoke, Va., escaped without injury. Police were questioning him late last night, trying to determine the cause of the crash.

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, Oct. 24.—On the day after the New York Ttimes announced its support of President Roosevelt in this campaign, Charles Merz, the Times' editor who wrote the Roosevelt editorial knew that a large number of letter and telegrams would be waiting for him. Merz walked into his office and, as he expected, a man-size pile of messages about the editorial covered his desk. This was the reaction of America's intellectuals, he mused. This was Public Opinion responding to one of the most important editorials in the history of one of the great newspapers of all time. . . . Merz seated himself at his desk and, with trepadition, opened the first telegram. It read: "Cheerio. Glad you're with our side." It was signed Frank Sinatra.

ORSON WELLES

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, sr., the First Lady of Society, is appearing at Roosevelt rallies. . . Marilyn Maloney, daughter of Senator Francis Maloney of Connecticut, has become an actress, playing dramatic roles for the Blue Network programs. . . . Orson Welles, after a hectic two-speeches-a-day tour of the East capped by his appearance at the Herald-Tribune Forum—was ordered by his doctor to stay in bed. . . . Louis Calhern, now making street-corner speeches, planned to campaign with dignity, in calm, genteel manner. Then, during his first speech, someone called him a Red and Calhern's response was: "I dare you to step outside, you so-and-so, and I'll knock your teeth in."

A boy came to the office of Dr. Benjamin Rones, the eminent eye specialist who operated on the King of Siam. Dr. Rones noticed that the youngster carried a Good Humor stick in his expensive eye-glass case. "That's the safest place to carry the stick," the boy explained. "And I must save these sticks, because if I save enough of them I get a free Good Humor" . . . Dr. Rones shook his head in wonder, an another patient asked him: "Why are you so startled at this?" . . . "Because," replied Dr. Rones, "that boy is the son of Nelson Rockefeller."

Pierre Blanchar, who appeared in the French Films "Crime and Punishment" and "Un Carnet de Bal," will be the first French actor leaving Paris for America. Blanchar, whose "Pique Dame" now is at the Fifth Ave. Playhouse, will arrive with his new film, "Pontarelle," a movie satirizing the Germans which was made during the occupation and shown throughout France . . . Alexander Wetmore is slated to be the newest director of the Smithsonian Institute . . . Former U. S. Attorney Matt Correa, who was commissioned a lieutenant in the Army and was assigned to Italy, is back now. He left the Army to become a major in the Marine Corps, as aide to Secretary Forrestal.

Senator Joe Ball's decision as to which candidate he'll support may be made during his appearance at the Americans United rally at Hunter College . . . Most of the $700,000 which Walter Wanger made at Universal last year came from "B" pictures. With this money Wanger is able to produce the less profitable but serious and arty films . . . Joe Schenck, who preceded George Jessel as Norma Talmadge's husband, introduced Jessel at a banquet and described him as "the best ex-husband Miss Talmadge ever had." Jessel acknowledged it by saying: "Thank you, Joe. And again you're a hard guy to follow" . . . Artie Shaw is bringing his new band to N. Y.

Col. Jock Lawrence, former press agent for Sam Goldwyn, has been awarded the Bronze Star. He already holds the Legion of Merit. Colonel Lawrence, chief public relations officer for the European theater, also was made assistant to Lieut. Gen. John C. H. Lee, Chief of Staff . . . Another Bronze Star recipient was Lieut. Jim Lucas, author of "Combat Correspondent." Lucas, who covered hundreds of such ceremonies, knew nothing about the technicalities and had to be drilled by a colonel all night . . . Zero Mostel, turning down $2000-a-week cafe offers, now spends much of his time at the Cafe Vienna on West 77th st., entertaining for nothing.

Ferenc Molnar listened to some playwrights using superlative descriptives about their work, and halted them long enough to relate this tale: In a Hungarian town, on one street, three tailors had their shops next to each other. The first, worldly-wise and aware of the benefits of advertising, decided to put up a sign over his shop. It read "Best Tailor In The World." The second tailor studied this sign, and decided to put up his own. It read "Best Tailor In This Town." The third studied his competitors' signs, and put up one also. It read "Best Tailor On This Street."

Howard S. Cullman, Broadway's No. 1 backer of plays, received this note from one of his tenants at 1697 Broadway: "As a tenant I have no complaint. I pay my rent promptly and you promptly accede to my requests." Then he inclosed a play he wrote which he wanted Cullman to back. Cullman replied: "As a landlord, I admit you are a desirable tenant. As a backer of plays I am returning your script." . . . Frank Borden, the Glass Hat's baritone, is the newest male singer to be eyed by the movie talent scouts. . . . Leo C. Rosten has finished his adaptation of Ellin Berlin's "Land I Have Chosen," and is coming East for Moss Hart's production of his play.

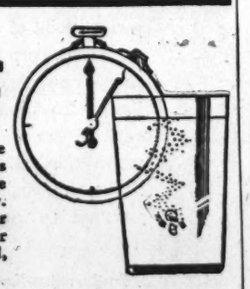
SWIFT RELIEF



When you have neuritic pain, you want the fastest relief you can possibly get. Millions take Bayer Aspirin because it provides the relief they want in a remarkable hurry. Bayer Aspirin starts disintegrating in water within 3 seconds. It does the same in your stomach. And the instant it has dissolved, it's ready to go to work!

SURE RELIEF

Swift relief is only half the story of Bayer's vital service to you. Dependable relief is important, too. That's why it pays to remember that Bayer—the original aspirin—since 1898 has proved its reliability in literally millions of normal cases, by giving needed pain-relief without even a trace of unpleasant reaction.

BAYER ASPIRIN GIVES YOU BOTH!

Montgomery Delays Award For Buildings

The Board of Montgomery County Commissioners yesterday delayed awarding contracts for the erection of two Service Aid Buildings, one in Bethesda and the other in Silver Spring, for a week, after opening sealed bids for the projects at its meeting in Rockville, Md.

All of the five bids exceeded the appropriation of approximately $18,000 for the two buildings. Judge Frank Proctor of the Juvenile Court, architect for the buildings, was authorized to study the bids and bring in a recommendation at next Tuesday's board meeting. The Commissioners are expected to enlarge their original appropriation.

It voted to build a cold storage room as an addition to the Montrose Elementary School, between Rockville and Bethesda, at a cost of $450. Action followed a request of the P-TA made through Dr. Edwin W. Broome, superintendent of schools, who explained that the school now is without facilities to comply with health department regulations in storing food necessary to serve hot luncheons to the school children.

An appropriation of $775 was authorized for additional improvements at the county's dog kennel at Meadowbrook but at the same time the board voted to advertise for open bids on the project. The commissioners recently voted to pay $1000 to correct conditions at the pound.

A petition of several residents requesting installation of a drainage sewer at Bradley Boulevard, Bradley Hills, was referred to the county engineer. He was instructed to make a survey and estimate the cost before the board sumbits it to the Maryland State Roads Commission for approval.

Expenses of 13 county health department employes who attended the American Public Health Association conference recently in New York were voted to be paid by county funds. They amounted to $342. Purchase of three new police cars to replace those in Silver Spring and Bethesda, exceeding 100,000 mileage on the speedometers, was approved.

It accepted the resignation of Fielding T. Sherrill, Bethesda county policeman, who said he entered more essential work as directed by the War Manpower Commission. A leave of absence for one year was granted Mrs. Lucille Cuney, public health nurse for the Glen Echo-Cabin John area, effective December 1, because of her husband's illness.

The Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department will be allowed $4.12 for the operation of its "tie line" to the Chevy Chase firehouse, used for the fire control center.

Use of two police radios for the Gaithersburg Volunteer Fire Department until it can purchase its own, was approved. They will be used on fire trucks to enable the department to call for additional help and the police when in remote sections and fighting forest fires.

The board set December 4 at 3:30 p. m. for a hearing on the petition of Marshall Lehman to rezone property in Linden, from residential "A" to commercial "D." Five other rezoning applications will be heard the same day.

Permits were granted the following organizations for benefit parties: Auxiliary of the Glen Echo Volunteer Fire Department, bingo, November 18; Gaithersburg Volunteer Fire Department, bingo, tomorrow, Tomlinson Chapter, Daughters of America, Cabin John, November 8 and the Cabin John Fire Department, dance, Saturday.

Cab Driver Gives Clew in Slaying Of Former WAAC

Baltimore, Oct. 24 (AP).—A woman taxicab driver reported to police today that she took a quarreling couple to 915 St. Paul st. last Friday morning about two hours before Evelyn Acker, 25-year-old warworker, was found fatally stabbed at St. Paul and Read sts.

The St. Paul st. address was the place where Miss Acker lived.

The driver, Mrs. Amelia Leitkowski, a middle-aged woman who was one of Baltimore's first women cabbies, said her fares answered the general description of Miss Acker and the man who neighbors said stabbed the young woman four times and left her on the pavement.

Police, who yesterday reported they were almost at a loss in the case and asked anyone with information to step forward, also announced that a man who reported he saw the former Wac waiting at the streetcar stop at St. Paul and Read st. had visited her quarters.

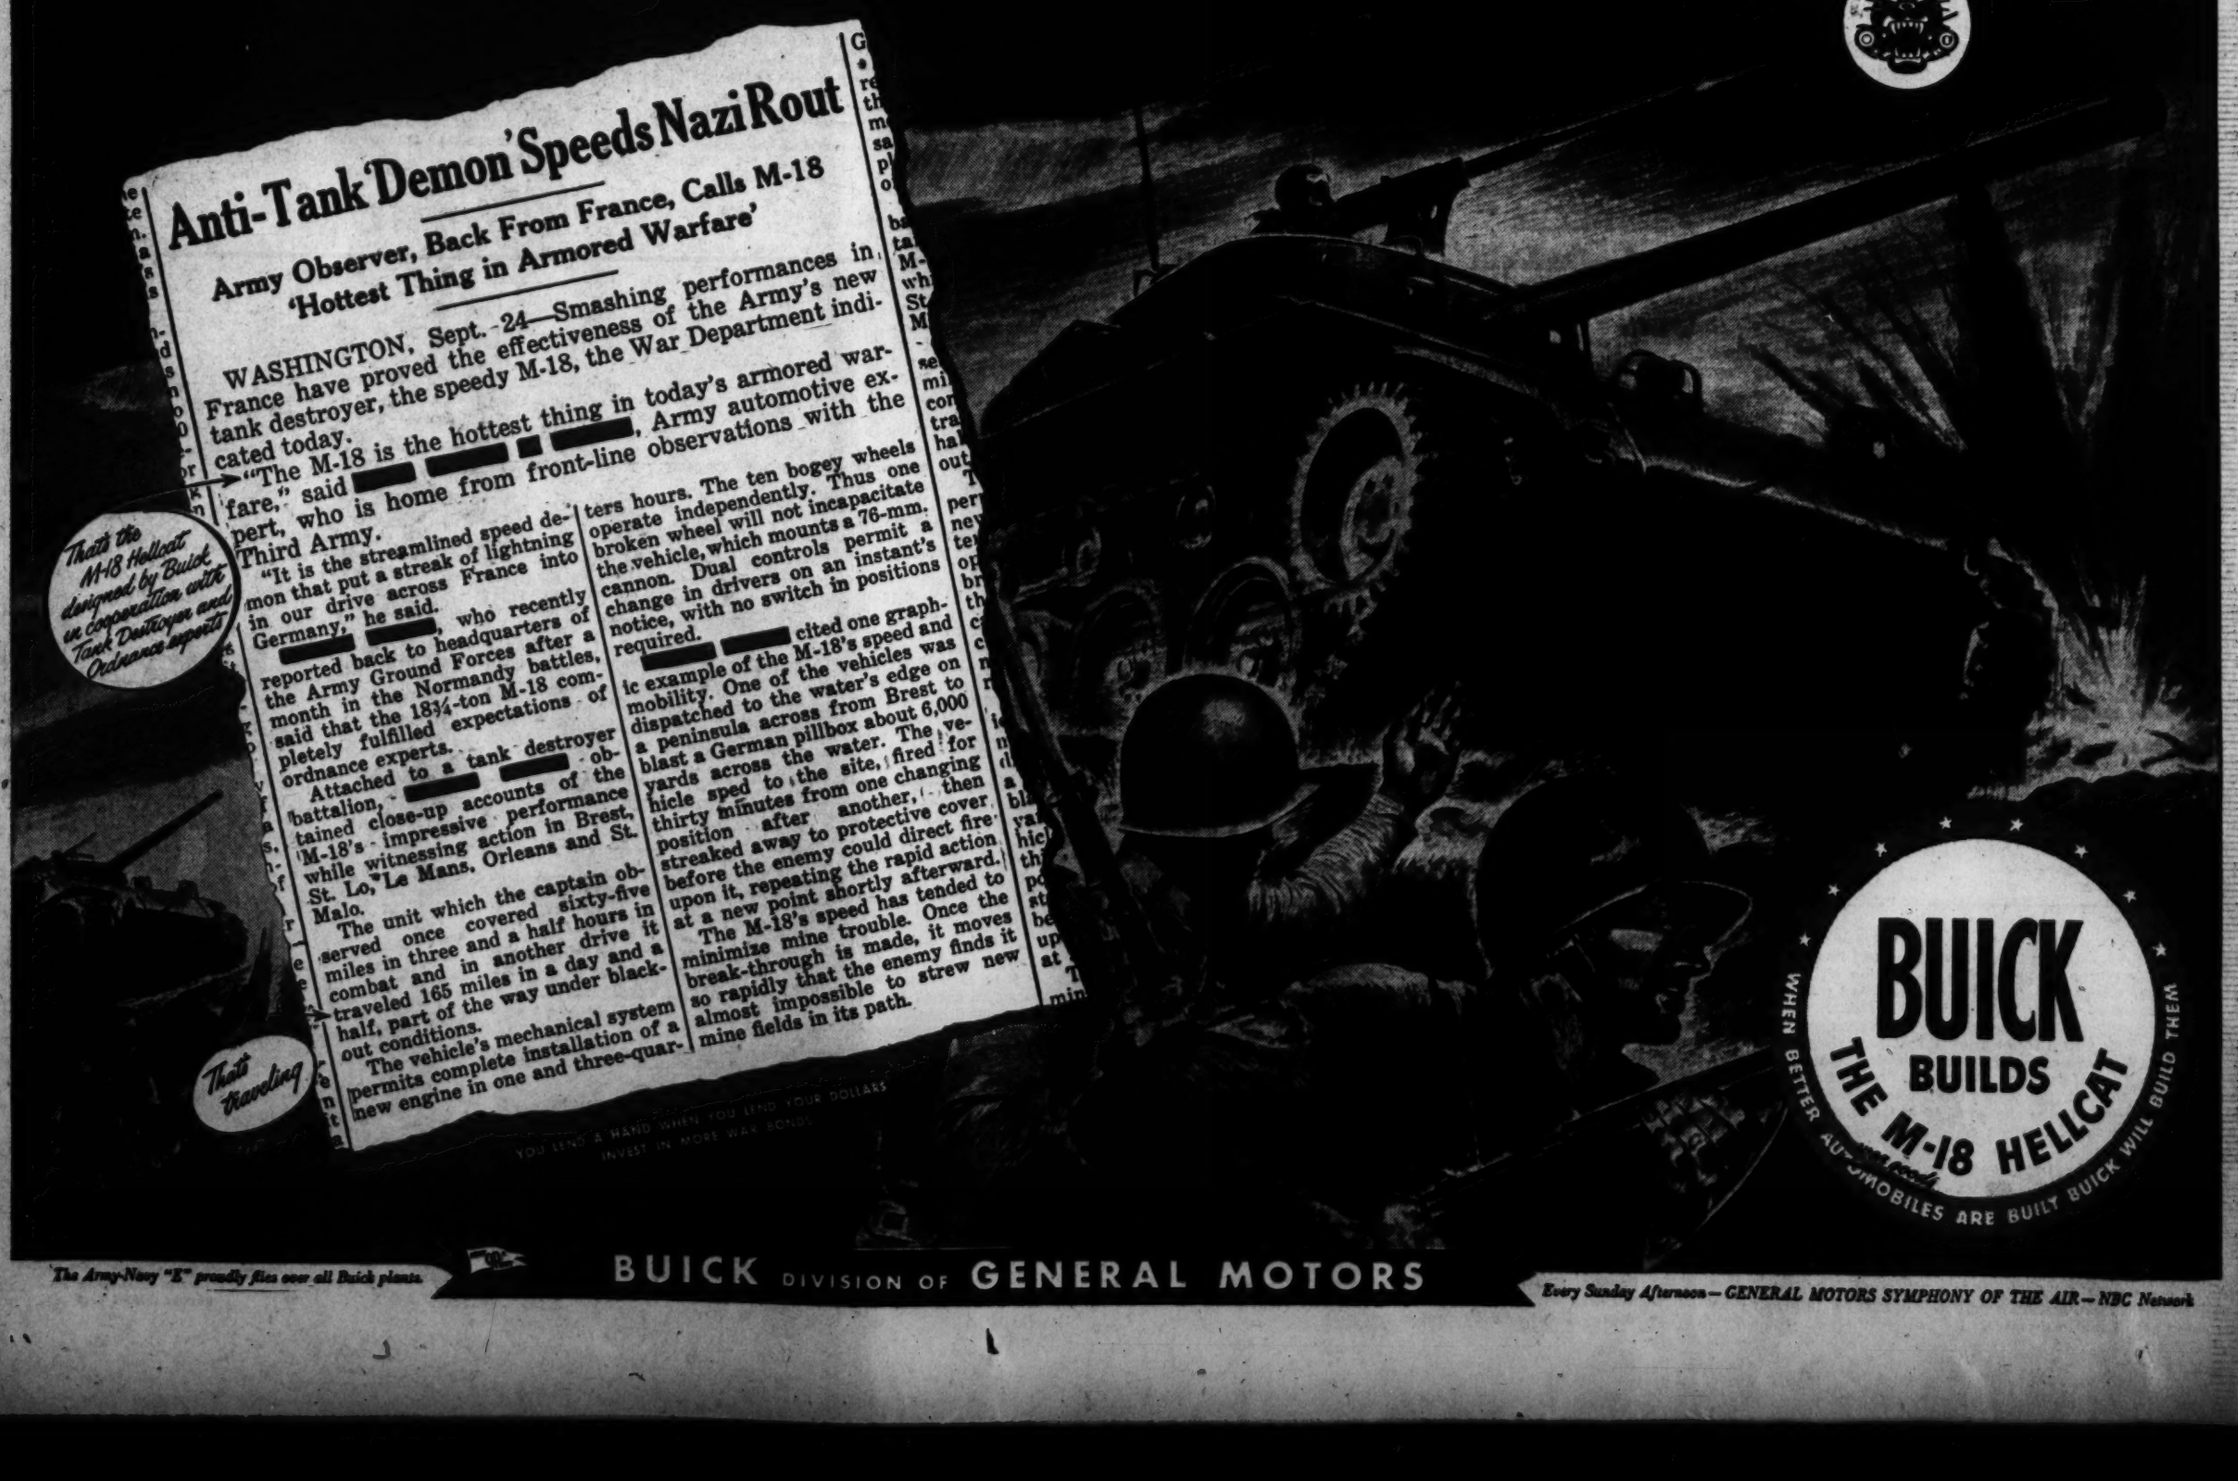
"Hottest thing in warfare"—the M-18 HELLCAT!



Anti-Tank 'Demon' Speeds Nazi Rout
Army Observer, Back From France, Calls M-18 'Hottest Thing in Armored Warfare'
WASHINGTON, Sept. 24—Smashing performances in France have proved the effectiveness of the Army's new tank destroyer, the speedy M-18, the War Department indicated today.
"The M-18 is the hottest thing in today's armored warfare," said [redacted], who is home from front-line observations with the Third Army.
"It is the streamlined speed demon that put a streak of lightning in our drive across France into Germany," he said.
[redacted], who recently reported back to headquarters of the Army Ground Forces after a month in the Normandy battles, said that the 18¾-ton M-18 completely fulfilled expectations of ordnance experts.
Attached to a tank destroyer battalion, [redacted] obtained close-up accounts of the M-18's impressive performance while witnessing action in Brest, St. Lo, Le Mans, Orleans and St. Malo.
The unit which the captain observed once covered sixty-five miles in three and a half hours in combat and in another drive it traveled 165 miles in a day and a half, part of the way under blackout conditions.
The vehicle's mechanical system permits complete installation of a new engine in one and three-quarters hours. The ten bogey wheels operate independently. Thus one broken wheel will not incapacitate the vehicle, which mounts a 76-mm. cannon. Dual controls permit a change in drivers on an instant's notice, with no switch in positions required.
[redacted] cited one graphic example of the M-18's speed and mobility. One of the vehicles was dispatched to the water's edge on a peninsula across from Brest to blast a German pillbox about 6,000 yards across the water. The vehicle sped to the site, fired for thirty minutes from one changing position after another, then streaked away to protective cover before the enemy could direct fire upon it, repeating the rapid action at a new point shortly afterward.
The M-18's speed has tended to minimize mine trouble. Once the break-through is made, it moves so rapidly that the enemy finds it almost impossible to strew new mine fields in its path.

Bon Jour Wins Quantico for Sixth Straight

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

At this point, the pro football picture in the East is a whole lot clearer. The best team in the East will probably be known after Sunday's result of the Philadelphia Eagles-New York Giants game is in. Right now, the Eagles seem to rate the vote.

POVICH

The Redskins are a downright lucky club to be undefeated at the end of their first three games. For Boston and Brooklyn, the season seems hopeless. Neither has won a game. Boston, afflicted with all the troubles of a first-year club dependent on the doubtful bounty of the other teams in the league, may not win a game this year. Brooklyn, though, could improve vastly.

Thus far the Eagles have proved the only team without a weakness. The Giants don't have a passer. The middle of the Redskins' line is pretty woeful and without Baugh their kicking isn't good. Boston lacks most everything a title contender needs, and Brooklyn has lost all of its three games because of its pathetic pass defense.

On Sunday at New York, the Eagles will throw the fanciest set of backs in the East against the Giants. The mainspring of their attack is tall Paul Zimmerman, one of the good players George Marshall traded off in one of his huffs. He kicks and runs and passes and he quarterbacks Greasy Neale's T-Formation better than any man the Redskins have come up with.

The worst thing that has happened to the Eagles this season is that 31-31 tie of two weeks ago when Frankie Filchock had his tremendous day with 25 completed passes. Since then the Eagles, with Steve Van Buren, rookie back, and the fleet Bob Steele teaming with Zimmerman, slapped down by a 38-0 score the Boston team that held the Redskins to 21-14.

It's never wise, though, to pick any team to beat Steve Owen's Giants. Stout Steve pulls too many tricks out of the hat. However, this week, he appears up against it. He figures to need more than two touchdowns to beat the Eagles, and his only passers are ancient Arnie Herber and Hank Soar. Ben Paschal ran wild in the 23-0 victory over the Chi-Pitts last week, but that team was torn by dissension.

In their victory over Brooklyn last week-end, the Redskins didn't send their followers out of the park in exactly high elation. What Brooklyn did to the middle of the Redskin line was a caution and the Redskins were saved from defeat only because the Tigers were ruled offside on Pug Manders 35-yeard gallop to th goal line.

The Redskins' T-Formation hasn't been very thrilling to date. Filchock has made it work pretty well, but when Baugh is in there and the Redskins need points, Sammy blithely junks the "T" in favor of the direct pass from center. As a weekend commuter to the Redskins' lineup, Baugh doesn't have the same slick touch anyway.

On Sunday, the Redskins meet the Chi-Pitts and they ought to win that one, but it's no lock. The Chi-Pitts have been in turmoil all season with player strikes, fines and suspensions. The bulk of their players are the Chicago Cardinals of last year, and we recall that the Redskins were the favorites to beat the Cardinals by 28 points in 1943. They finally won by a touchdown after that Cardinal line all but ran the Redskin line out of the park.

Erny Pinckert, the best blocking back the Redskins ever owned, writes from his Beverly Hills, Calif., home. "They're not letting me forget that 73-0 thing the Bears piled on us in 1940," says Pinckert, "but I always fall back on that 74-0 game in 1930 when I was on the winning side the day Southern California beat California."

"Football on the coast this year is interesting and that's about all," says Pinckert. "Every coach tries to use the 'T' and when he ends up on the wrong side of the score, he simply blames the Army and Navy for giving so little time to practice . . . what I can't understand is why they don't stick to simple, fundamental football. There is a shortage of footballs today and this dropping, fumbling and kicking the ball around every Saturday doesn't prolong the wear any."

It's no surprise to Pinckert, incidentally, that Frank Filchock is filling Sammy Baugh's shoes with the Redskins. "The 'Chucker' is a great little guy. Many fans apparently think he's a recent find. If they look up the past record they'll learn Filchock always was close up to Baugh in offensive figures. I was in his second team backfield, and he had a sense of humor. He kept us grinning instead of grunting many times when we were getting our teeth knocked out."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Oct. 24.—Steve Owen, the football coach, was ribbing Greasy Neale, coach of the Philadelphia Eagles, at the N. Y. Football Writers' luncheon at Toots Shor's place.

"Greasy here used to be a big league ball player," Stout Steven said. "Played with the Cincinnati Reds. But the only time he ever hit well was in a World Series . . .

"Yeah, the 1919 series when he hit against the Black Sox pitchers."

CONSIDINE

Capt. Alexis Thompson, owner of the Philadelphia Eagles and fresh back from France, tells us about a scene in the office of his boss, Brig. Gen. John Reed Kilpatrick, absent president of Madison Square Garden. Jack Sharkey and Lefty Gomez had been invited to the office before they set sail for the Mediterranean theater where, as you know, they did a great job.

Sharkey was demonstrating one of his fights for the General. Gomez was looking out the window, reflectively. He had heard the fight a few times before. Finally, Gen. Kilpatrick interrupted Jack's shadow boxing.

"I think it's a great thing for you fellows to be going overseas," he said. "But aren't you a little afraid that something will happen to you. How will you do when those shells start exploding around you?"

"Well," Gomez said, still looking out the window, "you do or you don't. They won't scare me."

Sharkey said, "Hell, no, general. I never saw a noise that could scare me." He went back into his shadow boxing, turning this way and that around the room.

Just then Gen. Kilpatrick noticed a fly on a batch of papers. He has devoted a fair portion of his life to swatting flies. He picked up his flyswatter and gave this one a tremendous wallop that sounded like a shot.

Sharkey, whose back was turned to the desk, staggered and nearly went down. Gomez almost went out the window.

The next morning, before dawn, Gomez and Sharkey were washing in a gloomy barracks. Sharkey soaped up his face until he had to close his eyes, then groped against the wall trying to find a nonexistent towel.

"Quit feeling for a towel," Lefty told him.

"Heluva note," grumbled Jack.

"Oh, I can understand it," Lefty said. "The Army figured you had so many thrown in for you that you'd never need another one."

Feed-box reports say that if the St. Louis Browns had lost that final game of the season, and blown the American League flag, that there would have been a spontaneous combustion civil war in the clubhouse after the defeat. The club was crawling with dissension during the September slump and stirring final finish.

However, everything turned out nicely and the boys got pally again for the series. But now a serious new threat has arisen.

Judge Landis' office sent out the series checks dispatching checks for $2,743.78 to each of the Brownies who was cut in for a full share.

But, horrors, to maek the whole thing come out even the judge added an extra penny to the checks of 16 of the Browns. We doubt if the others will speak to their enrichened clubmates when they meet again next spring.

Before leaving for Miami, Mike Jacobs told us that country-wide television broadcasts of his fights will commence right after the war "when they open up with the new stuff they've got." Mike, who has made a lot of wild dreams come true, says that some da yhe'll put on a fight that will be seen by 30 million customers in television theaters from coast to coast.

"And I can stage the fight itself in a Times Square hotel room," he beamed—as if there haven't been better fights in such places than Mike could ever hope to promote.

Notre Dame Still Leads Grid Parade

By Harold Claassen

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—Notre Dame and Army are closer than two cleats on the same football shoe in the third of the Associated Press' weekly polls today but that's no sign either will be anywhere near the top in the next one.

Notre Dame, which spent a torrid afternoon before defeating Wisconsin, 28 to 13 last Saturday, piles into Illinois this weekend while unbeaten, untied and untested Army collides with Duke.

The Irish retained their lead at the top of the tabulation—their thirteenth straight week there—by eight points, 917 points to 909. Illinois, whose Buddy Young is the Big Ten's leading scorer, is fourteenth in the ratings with Duke, beaten three successive times by outstanding teams, twenty-fourth.

Randolph Field, Ohio State, Georgia Tech, Iowa Preflight, Tulsa, Pennsylvania, Nort hCarolina Preflight and Purdue fill out the leading 10.

Of the elite group, Penn probably has the most formidable task ahead o fit this weekend. The unbeaten Quakers are scheduled against Navy, erstwhile member of the top 10 but now twelfth after the Middies' 17-to-15 loss to Georgia Tech.

The Atlantans are busy with Georgia Preflight Friday and Iowa Preflight entertains Marquette on Sunday. Purdue, cochampions with Michigan in the Big Ten last year, bor, while Tulsa battles neighbormeets the Wolverines in Ann Arring Oklahoma A. and M. and North Carolina Preflight bounces against Jacksonville Naval.

Ohio State, the top-ranking all-civilian outfit, has prospects of a rugged afternoon with Minnesota. Randolph Field is idle.

The top ten:

Notre Dame (40)	917
Army (30)	909
Randolph Field (22)	853
Ohio State (14)	790
Georgia Tech	589
Iowa, Preflight	347
Tulsa	269
Pennsylvania	269
N. C. Preflight	166
Purdue	153

Second 10—4th Air Force, 109; Navy, 101; Bainbridge Naval (2), 93; Illinois, 55; 2d Air Force, 52; Great Lakes, 46; Indiana, 44; Wake Forest, 38; Mississippi State, 23; Tennessee, 23; 3d Air Force, 23.

Other point winners—Michigan, 20; Washington, 18; Duke, 15; Texas, 13; Yale, 7; California, 7; Virginia, 6; Southern California, 5; Norman, Okla., Navy, 4; Camp Peary, 4; Texas Christian, 3; Tulane, 3; North Carolina, 1; Fleet City Bluejackets, 1.

Round-Robin Grid Tourney Planned At Harvard Nov. 18

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 24 (U.P.).—Football teams from Harvard, Holy Cross, Boston College and Tufts may meet in a round-robin war relief tournament at Harvard Stadium November 18, it was disclosed today.

Only the permission of Harvard officials to use the Stadium-Harvard in the past has been reluctant to have the stadium used for other than its own collegiate contests—and the fact that Holy Cross has a game booked November 19 appeared to be in the way of fulfilling the plan proposed at the weekly coaches' luncheon.

Under the proposal, undefeated Harvard would meet Holy Cross for two periods with Boston College and Tufts then playing two quarters. The winners would meet in another two-period contest for the championship. In event of a tie in the play-offs, the winner would be decided by the number of first downs and the number of times it had penetrated inside its opponents 20-yard line.

Tar Backs Drill In Pass Defense, While Line Rests

Annapolis, Oct. 24 (AP).—While Navy's tired line held a light scrimmage today, the Middie backfield went through heavy duty passing and running drills under the tutelage of Head Coach Comdr. Oscar E. Hagberg.

The Tar backs, hoping to thwart any passing attack which Pennsylvania may use Saturday when the squads meet at Philadelphia, tapered off in pass defense—one of the glaring weaknesses of the Navy eleven this season.

There was no report available from the Middie coaching staff as to the probable starting lineup against Penn but athletic sources indicated that something in the nature of a new alignment of backs might be brewing for Saturday's fray.

Alfred's Baba Captures Honors In Rappahannock Dog Trials

Colonial Beach, Va., Oct. 24. (AP).—The Rappahannock Field Trial Association today completed the running of the annual two-day field trials, the events including the members' all-age stake, the open shooting dog stakes and the open all-age stakes, which were started Monday afternoon. The trials were held at Leedstown, near here.

Placing first in the members all-age stake was Alford's Boba, owned by L. E. Alford, Petersburg. Second was Spike McPherson, a setter, owned by G. D. Richardson, Weedonville, while third was Spunky Creek Rip, a setter, owned by Leo Timberlake, of Fredericksburg. Winners were awarded silver vases as trophies.

Whirlaway Ferris Bob, a pointer owned by Julius Marcey, of Arlington, captured first place ni the open shooting dog stakes from a field of 10 starters. Second place went to Santee Pilot Sam, a pointer, owned by Frank Marcey, also of Arlington, while Lawson's Carolina Duke, a pointer owned by W. B. Lawson, also of Arlington, placed third.

The open all-age, which was started Monday afternoon with 20 entries, was captured this afternoon by Bootjack, a pointer owned by Harld Garman, of Reading, Pa. Second place went to Tomahawk Ben, a setter owned by E. C. Meade, of Richmond, while finishing third was Village Dictator, pointer, owned by John Rust, of Jacksonville, Fla.

Big Casino, pointer, owned by Stone and Herring, of Washington, D. C., placed first in the open Derby Monday morning. Second place went to Light Bulb, a pointer owned by Garman, while finishing third was Aldeco Queen, pointer, owned by E. D. Knight, of Richmond.

Merely the First Phase of U. of Washington Touchdown

Associated Press Wirephoto.

This bit of fancy stepping by Bob Beck, University of Washington quarterback, after catching a forward pass was followed by a lateral to Teammate Gordon Berlin, who scored stnding up. The touchdown didn't quite suffice, however, as Southern California won the game at Los Angeles, 38-7.

Jezrahel Wins Feature Event At Jamaica

Jamaica Race Track, N. Y., Oct. 24 (AP).—A son and daughter of Pharamond II disputed the issue when Emil Schwartzhaupt's Jezrahel and E. D. Levinson's Miss Drummond finished as named in the Storm King Purse, for 3-year-olds at 6 furlongs, here today. A length separated the pair at the wire, with Joe W. Brown's Fox Pass in missing the place by a half length.

It was the fourth consecutive triumph for Jezrahel, which won the 1943 Arlington Futurity when owned by John Marsch. The iron-gray gelding, privately purchased in Chicago, has proved a gem of consistency for Schwartzhaupt since shipping here and his owner only hopes that Pukka Gin, which he recently bought from Col. C. V. Whitney, may prove as successful as acquisition.

Jezrahel was a 3-to-5 choice today and gave the talent three scores in four events decided. He was timed in 1:11 4-5 with Eddie Arcaro up.

The Storm King was run to order for JJezrahel. Arcaro let the steady-going campaigner rate along third while Miss Drummond, known as one of the fastest sprinters around, was finding Saguaro possessed of speed to equal her own. The filly broke just behind Saguaro and soon shoved her head in front as they streaked for the first turn. However, she dropped back suddenly around the bend, allowing Saguaro to open up several lengths advantage. Jezrahel moved as they turned for home and gradually wore down Saguaro under pressure. Miss Drummond, which had faded to fourth a furlong from home, came on again in the closing strides, barely beating out the sluggish starting Fox Brownie.

Gwen Groves Wins Expert Rifle Award

Gwen Groves, 3608 36th st. nw., is the latest Washingtonian to be awarded an expert rifle rating by the junior division of the National Rifle Association.

To win the expert rating, Miss Groves had to prove her ability in the standing position, most difficult of all shooting positions. Using the standard NRA 50 feet gallery targets on which bulls-eyes are actually smaller than a .22 caliber bullet, Miss Groves was required to average at least 80 per cent accuracy for 50 shots.

Fistically Speaking, Mr. Conn Opens Opera Season In Bari

By Sid Feder

Bari, Italy, Oct. 24 (AP).—Mr. Billy Conn, the noted Pittsburgh Pagliacci, opened the season in triple-tiered Bari Opera House last night with a three-act production that might have shocked Bach but which pleased Gus Q. Fan no end.

Jacobs Beachcombers will be interested to learn that the most notable change in Mr. Conn is that he's grown up to be a heavyweight. The Pittsburgh pretty boy, who couldn't get over 175 carrying an anchor as a civilian, has added inches to his neck, shoulders and arms since joining the Air Corps.

He now tips the beam at 190 without the aid of even a ham sandwich—which is something you can't get in this land of "C" rations, anyway. A small part of this displacement is taken up by what Tut Tabor, Oakland, Calif., middleweight member of Conn's touring troupe, calls the "second front."

But the Tommies and GI's who packed the musically historic three decks were given quite a show as Mr. Conn pleayed a tune on Johnny Ebarb, California elouter, for three heats.

Billy's timing was a bit off, which is only natural—Prof. Joe Louis who was here a few weeks ago exhibited the same lack of tonal quality—but Conn still moves around like a guy with a double hot foot and still has a left hand that can spear a piece of chicken meat at five paces.

Conn's troupe, piloted by Lieut. Maury Schwartz of San Francisco, is here for a 10-week tour of Italian war front bases, after a trip around England which started as a three-week jaunt and finally required three months.

After Italy, it is possible the entire show may return to tour U. S. camps.

The troupe includes a half-dozen ETO champions, including Tabor, a likely postwar prospect; Heavyweight Leo Matrasini of Baltimore, Lightheavy Harold Raskin of Chicago, Welterweight Joe Lucignano of Hoboken, ... J., Featherweight Jerry Peceraro of Brooklyn, and Bantam Porty Marino of Santa Barbara, Calif. Others are Eighth Air Corps Champs Jimmy Wade of Detroit, lightheavy; Lew Cecere of Batavia, N. Y., welter, and Ray Wyzsinkowicz of New York.

Navy Booters Preparing For Penn Saturday

Annapolis (AP).—Navy's soccer team, successfully over what may have been their greatest test of the season by defeating Penn State 2-1 Saturday, looked ahead today to the game with the University of Pennsylvania on Saturday.

Coach Tom Taylor, jubilant over deefating Penn State—the team which tied Navy 2-2 last year and kept the Middies from a perfect season—placed much of the Saturday success to the able footwork of his two Latin American charges.

Peruvian born Arturo Calisto who was voted all-American center forward last year by the National Collegiate Soccer Association accounted for both goals for the Tars in the opening game of the season.

Played in South America

Calisto, who enteerd the Academy in 1943, played in South America before coming to the United States as a g alie and inside right when he attended the Peruvian Naval Academy. His home is in Iquitosv, Peru.

The other Middie from below the border who has helped start the Middie booters on another winning season was Jose Castano of Bogota, Columbia.

Castano is a plebe at the Annapolis school and his previous experience in soccer consisted entirely of playing inside right for the Naval Academy of the South American Republic of Columbia.

Taylor, who was named "soccer coach of the year" in 1943 by the National Collegiate Soccer Coaches' Association said that much of Navy's tight defense work against Penn State was due to the goal-protecting of Jack De Mayo of New Haven, who played for the Tar Junior Varsity eleven last year.

Leuschner at Center

Team Capt. Bob Leuschner of Baltimore holds down a very capable center half post on the team for his second year and is one of the most powerful kickers on the squad.

Holding down the fullback jobs are Left Fullback George Reaves of Salisbury, Md., and Right Fullback Bill Vander Wolk of Long Meadows, Mass. Reaves was also voted All-American in 1943 in his first year on the Navy varsity. Vander Wolk played for the jayve eleven last season at inside right. Outside right is Bill Pfefferkorn of Balitmore who was beset by injuries in 1942 and 1943.

At center forward is Calisto and inside left is occupied by Castano. Outside left is Bill Killefer who played for the jayvees last season.

American, P. C. Pro Grid Loops Confer

Los Angeles, Oct. 24. (AP).—Representatives of the American and Pacific Coast Professional Football Leagues had a conference yesterday, but would say nothing on a report that a merger of the two circuits is in the air.

A statement, issued by a press agent, said:

"No definite conclusions were reached."

Pacific Coast Loop Plans Longer Chart

Los Angeles, Oct. 24 (AP).—The net Pacific Coast League baseball season will be 200 games long, instead of the 179 games played this year.

League directors have voted to open for business March 31 and close September 23. They also have decided to propose to the National Baseball Association that all players drafted from an AA league, such as the Coast Circuit, should fetch $15,000, instead of the present price of $7500.

Walker Hailed As Virginia's Greatest End

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 4 (AP).—The University of Virginia today is acclaiming a new luminary of the gridiron in Henry Walker of Griffin, Ga., whose work at end in the four games engaged in by the Cavaliers so far this year has marked him as one of the best flankmen to wear Virginia's orange and blue in many a season.

Walker started the season at fullback, playing in the backfield against Hampden-Sydney, gaining 52 yards in seven carries. He scored one touchdown in a dash over tackle.

In high school at Griffin and last year at South Carolina Walker played end, and because Virginia needed ends he switched to the left flank for the second game. He performed wel against North Caroline State and was even better against West Virginia, snaging three forward passes and taking one of them over on a 25-yard run for Virginia's first touchdown.

It was against the powerful North Carolina Preflight that the Georgia Flankman performed sensationally. Old timers here, comparing him with Virginia's many fine ends, say he was as good as the best of them. The Cloudbusters rated him the best end to play against them this year, and some of their coaches termed him the best they have seen in several seasons.

Coach Frank Murray is high in his praise of Walker, terming him the first Cavalier he has coached in eight seasons who could play any position on the team.

Walker is 19 years old, stands an even six feet and weighs 175 pounds. He was an all-State end at Griffin High School, where he won three letters in basketball and tennis, and two in track. He was regular end for the Gamecocks last fall but was trnasferred to Virginia in March to enter the Naval Reserve.

Penn and Navy Still Get Ticket Requests

Philadelphia, Oct. 24. (AP).—With the Penn-Navy game already a sell-out, letters are still arriving from relatives of servicemen saying so-and-so is "coming home from overseas" and would like a ticket.

"The whole Army and Navy seem coming home to see this game," said one harassed ticket seller.

Blessed Sacrament Wins

Blessed Sacrament eleven scored a 20-0 victory over St. Ann's yesterday in a Parochial School game at Chevy Chase Playground. Jimmy O'Boyle, Tommy Crowley and Bobby O'Donnell tallied the touchdowns for the victors.

Scores Easy Victory By Two Lengths

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Laurel, Oct. 24.—Bon Jour, owned by Charles Turner of Toronto, added the $4000 Quantico Handicap to his string to win his sixth straight race today. Carrying top weight of 126 pounds and confidently handled by Jockey Doug Dodson, the 4-year-old son of Sun Beau was an easy two-length winner of the test of a mile and a sixteenth. Winner of the $15,000 Bryan-O'Hara here and the $15,000 Trenton Handicap at Garden State Park, Bon Jour operated in the role of an odds-on favorite and stepped the route in 147 3-5 over a fast track and before some 8500 customers.

The Edgehill Stable's He Rolls was second and three parts of a length in advance of William Helis' Alfios. Only three others competed.

The victory was a qualifying effort by Bon Jour for the $25,000 added Washington Handicap. If Bon Jour can win the weekend feature, he will move into the Pimlico Special.

Alfios Takes Early Lead

Alfios was sent to the front early and opened a long lead while followed by Soldier Song and He Rolls with Bon Jour running fourth and being rated while saving ground. As the field approached the stretch, Dodson took Bon Jour to the outside and then gradually allowed him to wear down the leaders. Bon Jour was running easily at the end and He Rolls, under a drive, forced the tiring Alfios out of second money.

The victory was the 8th in 18 starts for Bon Jour this year. The former claiming race performer added $2650 to bring his 1944 earnings $76,020.

Two secondary attractions were offered and the favorite won one of them and a second choice the other.

Hasteville, racing in the colors of Gustave Ring, got up to win by a length in the six furlong Hoefield Purse, for seasoned sprinters. Ralph Root was up and the payoff was $4.60 as Hasteville came from behind to catch Armand L. Levinson's Freeland's Lad half way through the home lane to score going away. Christiana Stable's High Command always well up, was third.

High grade 2-year-olds competed at 6 furlongs in the fifth and W. H. Lipscomb's Miss Burke rang up her second straight when Dick Meade had her on the front end all the way to win by four lengths in 115 1-5. Second choice, she paid $7.40. Five horses were real close in the battle for second, with Oliver J. R. Troup's Miss War nosing out Mrs. Mildred Jacobs' Service Ribbon for that position.

The crowd got off on the right foot when Mrs. Guy Needy's Rampage outran 11 rivals in the 6-furlong opener, getting home with seven lengths to spare as the $4.20 choice. Meade was the winning rider as Rampage turned back Pentagon Lody and Grand Fortune.

Johnny Gilbert put on a good exhibition to drive Dogwood Farms' Split the Wind home by 2 lengths in the second, this one also a favorite at $4.50. C. F. Hockley's iSr Jinx beat Capt. Henry H. Hecht's Milkfloat for the place in this contest for Maryland-bred juveniles.

The Rampage-Split the Wind combination paid $9.20 in the daily double.

Gino Garibaldi, Dutch Rohde Top Tonight's Mat Card

Dutch Rohde, still No. 1 glamour guy at Turner's Arena, and a right competent rassler, too, meets Gino Garibaldi, the fast 'n' foxy Italian, tonight in another elimination tournament tangle. This finish encounter tops a set of five matches for the night, with colorful Michele Leone holding the secondary spot in his clash with John Vansky, rough Jersey gent.

This is Garibaldi's first appearance before District mat addicts in several months and ringsiders always seem to enjoy watching the venerable Signor work. He knows more holds than the good book of wrestling itself, and he embellishes this with unusual speed. Fans who have wanted to see the stylish, but oft-times rough and cock-sure Rohde put to a test against a truly scientific rival will see exactly that tonight.

The underneath show tonight has some sparkling workmen. In addition to the Leone-Vansky match, Turner has paired the two speed specialists, Duke Keomuka and Billy Darnell. The spectacular "Masked Commando" opposes Ed "Strangler" White, and Hans Kaempfer draws Nick Ilitch as his opponent in the other prelim.

P.B.C. Grid Activities Confined to 5 Games

Football activities in the Police Boys' Club League this week were confined to five games.

In the 125-pound League No. 4 nosed out Mt. Rainer 13 to 6, No. 5 beat No. 10, 19 to 0, and No. 11 trampled No. 12, 37 to 0.

In the 150-pound class No. 4 walloped Merrick, 26 to 0, and No. 5 defeated No. 10, 13 to 6. Newman, Sanford, Tawney, and Cornwell scored touchdowns for No. 4, Goff and Murray tallied for No. 5 and George Denikos hit pay dirt for No. 10.

Laurel Booters Bow

Laurel, Md., Oct. 24.—The Bladensburg High School soccer team defeated Laurel High, 2 to 1, in a air-tight played game here today. Ben Rowe booted in the deciding goal in the third period.

Indians to Meet Wolfpack in 1st Conference Game

Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 24 (AP).—William and Mary takes its first venture into Southern Conference competition since it won the championship in 1942 Saturday when it tackles North Carolina State on Foreman Field at Norfolk, and all members of the tribe, from head coach R. N. McCray down to the veriest tyro on the far end of the bench, are working zealously to be in top form for the meeting.

McCray is devoting much of his time in the interim between now and game time to polishing hte line inot some semblance of the great forward walls which characterized William and Mary teams in the past. In Tom Mikula, from Johnstown, Pa., a guard, and Johnny Clowes, captain and tackle, McCray has the nucleus for one of the best lines in the State, and if he can discover working matse for these two his greatest wish will be realized.

After the Wolfpack clash, the Indians have Southern Conference engagements with the University of North Carolina, Virginia Military Institute and the University of Richmond.

Mack Expects to Buy Minneapolis Club Soon

Philadelphia, Oct. 24 (AP).—Manager Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics said his rumored purchase of the Minneapolis ball club of the American Association "may take place sooner than we think."

He said, "We have things pretty well mapped out but no money has changed hands yet" and added:

"We want to own a double A team. It's just a case that nowadays a major league team was to have a team in Double A.

"Of course we want to give Minneapolis a good ball club, too."

Twice Disappointed in Love, Girl of 29 Is Bewildered and Dejected; Should She Marry Man, 40, Whom She Vaguely Dislikes?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 29 and have been in love twice; but I don't seem to have enough emotional maturity to handle such a relationship wisely. In both cases, the men were very much attracted to me at first; but their enthusiasm faded as mine increased. I strongly suspect they decided I had little to offer except physical appeal,—a conclusion which leaves my self confidence at very low ebb.

Now, a man of 40 has proposed marriage to me. Our backgrounds are much the same, but he is a poor conversationalist and seems to take heavy petting too much for granted. After five months' courtship, I find him boring. He is without physical attraction for me and I feel ashamed of him. On the other hand, I know I have lots of deficiencies in personality, too, which I've been trying for nine years to get straightened out. I wonder now if I'll ever succeed.

Marriage is something I'v always wanted; and marriage to him would give me security,—as much as one could expect, ordinarily; and also love, of which I've had very little, really. This is the first time I have ever considered marrying a man I cared so little about. Do you think there is much to be said in favor of it? All I know is, I have never regretted saying "No," to other men I didn't love. But after losing the two men I wanted to marry, I am thoroughly confused. It might be an "out" for me; and again, it might mean unhappiness for both of us. What do you think? E. P.

Don't Make False Move

DEAR E. P.: As I get the picture, it would be a hideous blunder to marry this man, when your inclination is to hold your nose at the very thought of him. Since you can scarcely abide his tedius, oafish, heavy-handed society in scot-free association, you may be sure you would find yourself over taken by a shuddering sense of spiritual degradation, of hopeless uncleanness of mind and experience, if you were bound to the proposition of being "one flesh" with him.

Your perspective is terribly warped at present, if you think the best you can do for yourself is to marry a man who grates on your nerves as a bore and stinker. Truly you stand poised to leap from the frying pan into the fire. You are alreday the victim of hysterical self-loathing, due to a series of luckless adventures with men; and you simply cannot afford to demean yourself further, in your own view before the eyes of the world, by becoming the wife of a man you casually despise.

Set Your Feet On High Road

WHEN you are ashamed of him even as a friend, just the nominal fact of being his wife would inflict new tortures on your sensitive and sick imagination. Your social appearances with him would be a nightmare ordeal of endless martyrdom, in which you would hourly die a thousand deaths in mortification, based on the assumption that he, on his own account (utterly objectionable, as you see him), and you as his contaminated wife, were a pariah pair. And where, in that setup, is there any cure for your present nagging conviction of failure and personal deficiency? Surely it carries the opposite threat,—complete collapse of self respect, and final renunciation of all hope for happy living.

So my advice is,—Don't give his proposal a second thought, except to reject it. If he chooses to linger as a friend, then by all means rule out his "heavy petting." And if he doesn't like that, rule him out, too. As a habit of deep neurosis, and also in craven accommodation to cheapskate sensualists, you have been grading yourself too low. Have done with this witless error. Put a high estimate on yourself, as a chastened child of God, and then live up to it sincerely,—and yuo'll be traveling the road where real love is found. M. H.

Miss Hammond Captain Knight Repeat Vows

White gladioli and candles decorated the altar of St. Joseph's Chapel in Washington Cathedral for the wedding yesterday afternoon of Miss Sara Mae Hammond, daughter of Mrs. Hiram Nelson Hammond of Arlington, Va., and Birmingham, Ala., and the late Mr. Hammond, to Capt. Charles Louis Knight, AUS, Inspector General's Division.

Bridegroom is son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hugh Knight of Brandon, Fla.

The Rev. Edward Hughes Pruden of the First Baptist Church, and Canon W. Curtis Draper, jr., officiated at the 4:30 p. m. rites. Judge Travis Williams, Atlanta, Ga., old friends of the family, gave the bride in marriage.

Skirt Ends in Train

The bride wore ivory satin, cut on princess lines, with full skirt ending in train, heart-shaped neckline, lace yoke and long-pointed lace sleeves. Her fingertip veil of illusion was held by a Juliet cap. White calla lilies tied with matching ribbon formed the bridal bouquet.

Mrs. James Hammond, sister-in-law of the bride and matron of honor, wore an old-fashioned dress of aquamarine-colored marquisette made with heart-shaped neckline and long-pointed sleeves. A veil fell from her matching half hat and she carried American beauty roses tied with matching ribbon.

Capt. Hugh Knight, Crossville, Tenn., was best man for his brother and ushering were T. Randall Ivins, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Lebanon, Ohio; Earl Simrell, Lieut. Sherwood Booth and Lieut. Henry Nichol, all of Washington.

At the reception which followed in the Pan-American room of the Mayflower Hotel, the bride's mother wore an orchid-colored Spanish lace dress with matching feather hat and orchid corsage. Mrs. Knight was costumed in gray crepe with plume hat and corsage of orchids.

Leave for Hot Springs

When the couple left for a honeymoon in Hot Springs, Va., the bride wore a fur-trimmed blue costume suit with black accessories. Captain and Mrs. Knight will go to Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, after the wedding trip.

The bride received her A.B. degree from the University of Alabama and the LL.B. degree from the law school there. Currently employed as attorney for RFC, she was a member of Phi Mu Sorority, Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Delta Delta, legal fraternity.

After attending the University of Virginia, the bridegroom took his Ph.D. degree at the University of Pennsylvania, his LL.B. degree from George Washington School of Law. A member of Phi Beta Kappa, he was engaged in private practice before entering the Army.

Davison-Mott Troth Revealed

The betrothal of Miss Mary Helen Davison to Lieut. Thomas Townsend Mott 2d, USAAC, son of Thomas Townsend Mott, Bethesda, Md., and Mrs. Daisy Hubbard Mott, Washington, has been announced by the parents of the bride-elect, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Vere Davison, Chevy Chase, Md.

Miss Davison was graduated from National Cathedral School for Girls and Marjorie Webster Junior College. Landon School is the prospective bridegroom's alma mater. He is stationed at Drew Field, Tampa, Fla. No date has been set for the wedding.

Chevy Chase Unit To Hear Address

Dr. W. M. Gewehr, professor of European history at the University of Maryland, will address the international relations section of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club tomorrow at 2 p. m. In discussing "Some Unfinished Business" he will stress international organization and comment on the Dumbarton Oaks agreement.

This year the section will study the economic and political setup of some of the small countries. Small forums and debates are scheduled with members of the group and committee taking part.

Hope Erwin's Debut Planned At Christmas

Another Capital miss this week places her name on the small list of debbies who will make their formal bow to society this winter.

She is pretty Hope Erwin, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin who plan a series of dinners in her honor during the Christmas holidays, when Hope will be home from Vassar.

Dates for the dinners have not as yet been set, but Mrs. Erwin plans to keep them small and simple within the bounds of wartme entertaining. Guests will be entirely from the young set, fellow debutantes and officers home on leave.

In June, Colonel and Mrs. Erwin will entertain for their daughter at a formal garden party when she will be presented to their friends.

Other girls who will make their debut during the Christmas recess include Miss Francine Whitten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Whitten, and Miss Virginia Summerlin, whose parents, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Horace B. Smith, have announced a party in her honor December 23.

Also on the holiday docket is the dinner dance at 1925 F Street Club planned for Miss Lelia Gordon Dickey, daughter of Mrs. Newbold Noyes, at which her aunt, Mrs. John Gross, Bethlehem, Pa., will be hostess. Miss Dickey's mother will give a tea in her honor a few days before the dance.

Envoy to Talk To Smith Club

More than a hundred members of the Smith College Club of Washington will meet at luncheon today, 12:45 p. m., YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw., to hear the Greek Ambassador, Cimon Diamantopoulos, speak on progress of Greek War Relief.

Alumnae are participating in the activities of Greek War Relief this year, carrying on the tradition of the relief work done by a unit in France at the end of the last war.

Mrs. L. Metcalfe Walling will preside and Mme. Diamantopoulos and Shirley Weber of the State Department will be guests. Program for the winter will be announced and committee work started for the benefit performance of Larry Adler and Paul Draper January 16 at Constitution Hall for scholarship funds of Smith and Ginling in China.

Admiral Liu Entertains; Colonel Medina Is Host

It might have been a conclave of the United Nations at the Mayflower yesterday, so numerous were the international citizens who assembled there for lunch, reception and dinner.

Late in the afternoon two large fetes took place there in adjacent reception rooms with gold braid and military insignia of a dozen lands coloring both assemblies. Rear Admiral Liu, Chinese Naval Attache, was host to one group and Col. Hector Medina, ranking officer of the Uruguayan Military Mission, currently touring this country, entertained at the other after-6-p.-m. affair.

But the visitor who captured the lion's share of attention during the day was petite Mrs. James Milne Charnley, jr., who, before her marriage a few weeks ago in New York's St. Patrick's Cathedral, was Maria Osmena, daughter of the President of the Philippines.

War News Hastens Wedding

Here for a brief stay, Mrs. Charnley lunched with friends in the Mayflower Lounge and explained that her wedding date had been moved up hastily due to the fact that her father was expecting to leave daily for General MacArthur's headquarters.

The President's return to the islands, where his wife and other children are interned, was the most dramatic and triumphant moment in his life, according to Maria Charnley. "His appearance with unlimited forces to face the hated Fifteenth Japanese Division which inflicted the cruelties at Corregidor and Bataan was a far different story from his perilous escape through enemy-infested waters more than two years ago," she told friends.

Although the much traveled Maria has never been to the site of the Leyte beachhead, she has been on a part of the island, which is not far from her home in Cebu, one of central islands group.

She will return to New York the end of the month when her musician husband completed a current concert tour.

Soon after 5 o'clock the first of Admiral Liu's 300 guests began arriving in the Chinese room. Among those invited were the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Edward R. Stettinius, jr., Admiral William Leahy, Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn, Rear Admiral and Mrs. H. E. Yarnall, Rear Admiral and Mrs. R. S. Edwards, the former United States Ambassador to Japan and Mrs. Joseph S. Grew, the newly named chief of ONI, Rear Admiral Leo H. Thebaud, and Mrs. Thebaud, and many more.

General Ord Host

Colonel Medina's party was a "thank you and farewell" to official Washingtonians who have entertained him and members of his mission the past three days. Final event in his honor was the dinner following when Maj. Gen. James F. Ord, United States Army delegate to International Defense Board, was host.

With Colonel Medina on a month's tour of the country have been Col. Jose A. Cortese, Lieut. Col. Hector J. Blanco and Lieut. Col. Anibal Gaye. Their trip was made at the invitation of the War Department.

GOP Women Name Speaker For Luncheon

Ray Tucker, Washington newspaperman, author and lecturer for more than 20 years, has accepted an invitation of the League of Republican Women to give a nonpartisan appraisal of the presidential campaign, at the "Double-the-Vote-for-Dewey Day" luncheon in the Congressional Room, Statler Hotel, today.

Mr. Tucker has just returned from a trip through Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Maryland and the New England States. While in New York he was a guest of Governor and Mrs. Dewey at Albany.

Preceding Mr. Tucker's address, Mrs. Cooper B. Rhodes, Republican National Committeewoman of the District, will speak on "Woman's Stake in the Coming Election."

Speakers will be introduced by Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington, program chairman.

Phelps Adams, newspaper columnist of the New York Sun, who was scheduled to speak at the luncheon, is in the hospital recovering from an injury sustained in an automobile accident last week.

More than 300 reservations have been received at the league's office.

WOMEN IN YOUR '40's is your age betrayed by
HOT FLASHES?

If you—like so many women between the ages of 38 and 52—suffer from hot flashes, nervous tension, are weak, tired, cranky, a bit moody at times—all due to the functional middle age period peculiar to women—try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve such symptoms.

For almost a century — thousands upon thousands of women —rich and poor alike—have reported remarkable benefits. In fact many wise women take Pinkham's Compound regularly during this period to help build up resistance against such symptoms.

Pinkham's Compound helps nature! Also a grand stomachic tonic. Follow label directions.

Murray Campaign Wagons on Tour

Warrenton, Va., Oct. 24 (Spl.). Supporters of Mrs. Elizabeth Chilton Murray, Independent Democratic candidate, are on their campaign today in two horse-drawn wagons.

The campaign poster-bedecked vehicles will move about the Eighth District for four days, reaching Culpeper Thursday.

Mrs. Murray, ill at her home in Fairfax, was expected to join them as soon as she is able.

Her opponents are Representative Smith, Democrat; Lawrence Michael, Independent Republican, and Clarke T. Robb, Socialist candidate.

NAPOLEON

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

HAPPY 5-YEAR-OLD Johnny Boettiger has been hearing a lot of campaign talk around the White House, where he lives while his father is in the Army. Little Johnny, grandson of the President, is the son of FDR's only daughter, Anna Boettiger.

The other day, toward the end of a family lunch at which politics were being discussed, little Johnny perked up his ears, turned to his mother and asked:

"Mama, if Mr. Dewey is elected, will he be my granddaddy, too?"

Tangled Senator

CAPITOL REPORTERS milled about outside the locked door of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee. Inside, the committee was trying to decide whether it should investigate the battle of the Statler. Fireworks were expected.

Actually, however, the secret session was a very quiet matter. Major part of the hour and a half was taken up by Michigan Senator Homer Ferguson's careful perusal of the large file of affidavits the committee had collected on the Statler battle. Whereas, other members merely glanced through the affidavits hurriedly, Ferguson did not miss a word.

When he finished, the Michigan Senator, a former Detroit circuit judge, demanded a public hearing but was outvoted four to one, with his Republican colleague, Joe Ball of Minnesota, joining the majority. The four other members of the committee insisted that an open hearing on the matter would be bad for Navy morale and prestige.

After the vote was taken, there was a brief discussion of the entire incident, with Senator Tom Stewart of Tennessee remarking that he hoped members of the committee wouldn't go out speaking on the matter.

"As I recall," said Stewart, with a sly grin toward Ball, who has been worrying the Republicans by his refusal to support Dewey, "Joe, here, has a few speeches scheduled."

"Yes, he has," Ferguson chimed in. "Only trouble with Joe is he doesn't know whom to make them for."

Local Republican Revolts

REGARDLESS OF HOW they feel about Roosevelt and Dewey, several State elections are attracting attention because local Republicans refuse to vote for their own candidates. Here are some of the GOP rebellions:

ILLINOIS—(1) Where many Republicans are turning thumbs down on weak-kneed GOP senatorial candidate Richard J. Lyons and have openly come out for Democratic Senator, Scott Lucas, who has had an outstanding record in Congress. Some Republican leaders have even organized a committee to boost Lucas against Lyons.

ILLINOIS—(2) Where many Republicans can't stomach GOP Representative-at-large Stephen Day, the congressman who sent a telegram of congratulations to Hitler after he came into power in 1933, and later wrote a book published by the Nazi-subsidized publishing house, Flanders Hall. Day is being opposed by Mrs. Emily Taft Douglas, daughter of sculptor Loredo Taft and wife of Professor Paul Douglas, now with the Marines in the South Pacific.

NEW YORK—Where Congressman Ham Fish has been repudiated by Governor Dewey and where the Republican candidate in the primaries, Gus Bennett, is now running against Fish on the Democratic ticket.

PENNSYLVANIA — Where many Republicans are organizing against GOP Congressman Wolfenden in the Eighth District. For many years this district, which includes suburban Philadelphia, was represented by the father of Gen. Smedley Butler, who as chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, helped build up the United States Navy. Now Eighth District Republicans are represented by a man whom no one has ever heard of in Congress and who went duck-shooting on the day the United States declared war against Germany. Many GOPers therefore are now working for Democratic Candidate Lieut. Vernon O'Rourke, a former Swarthmore college professor now in Italy.

Special New Service

WHILE GOVERNOR DEWEY was campaigning in St. Louis, recently, his host was unassuming Republicann Gov. Forest Donnell, now running for the Senate. Donnell is as unimpressive-looking as any man in public life.

Before Dewey appeared on the stage for the big mass meeting, Donnell entered, unaanounced., unapplauded, took a seat at the side of the stage. Shortly thereafter a Catholic priest delivered the invocation, whereupon a harried newspaperman in the Dewey eutourage leaned over the press section and stage-whispered to Donnell.

"Hey you, hop up and get me the name of the father who delivered the invocation!"

The Governor of Missouri meekly obeyed. He got to his feet, went over and brought back spondent.

Several minutes later, Donnell rose again, was introduced to the crowd. Heart failure almost seized the reporter who had been ordering him around. After the meeting the reporter apalogized.

"'It's all right," replied Donnell. "I wasn't doing anything anyway."

The O'Daniels

THE "W. LEE O'DANIEL NEWS" is just a plaything for the kids, Mrs. O'Daniel, wife of the pass-the-biscuits "Pappy" Senator told the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee last week. Pulling out all the stops, Mrs. O'Daniel sobbed her way through a bitter but clever attack on Chairman Theodore Green of Rhode Island, whose major fault as chairman is that he is too much of a gentleman.

She accused him of judging without a hearing, smearing and a few other things while her husband—who has belabored the committee on more than one occasion because it caused him to testify—smiled smugly at her elbow.

O'Daniel, incidentally, interrupted the testimony of his lieutenant, Garfield Crawford, to demand that his wife be heard—just when the session was getting too hot for Crawford. The committee was ready to go into the identity of the "little men" whose "big" donations of from $500 to $25,000 financed O'Daniel's hate campaign against Roosevelt.

Mrs. O'Daniel also spoke proudly of her own sons who "gave up a year in their studies at the University of Texas to don the uniform and serve their country during this horrible war."

But the real fact is that these two sons were kept within a 20-minute automobile drive of Washington until this columnist recently revealed they had been kept close to home.

One of them was even given three different chances in an officers' candidate school, whereas other boys never get a second chance at a commission, once they flunk.
